

CALL of the WEST

BY R. G. MONTGOMERY

CHAPTER XXVII

Asper Delo waited impatiently for Donna to return with news from the posse. He was impatient because he feared that, even though the bandit was surrounded, he might escape. When she did not come Asper tried to stand up and found that he was much more able to walk than he had thought.

About 4 o'clock Dudley came riding across the clearing. He looked as fresh as though he had just stepped out of a barber shop. Asper glared angrily at him as he swung down from his horse.

"What's doing up there? Where is Donna?" Asper spat out the questions. It was relief to take his impatience out on someone.

"The men are milling around but they haven't captured or killed anyone yet," Dudley sneaked a spot of dust from his trousers. "I haven't seen Donna. I should think she'd stay in camp! This is a man's business."

Asper exploded with a roar. "You take it pretty smooth, don't you? You don't seem much worried about her! You'd better be looking around and showing some life!"

Dudley backed down two steps before this broadside. "Why, she can't be in danger!" he argued.

"Not in danger? You complacent fool! She may be in worse danger than that from a bullet!" Asper got up from his chair and reached for a heavy cane that had been placed near him to use in pulling articles within his reach.

"Easy, sir! You'll do yourself a lot of harm!" Dudley advanced to the top step again and lifted a warning hand.

Asper smashed the heavy end of the cane down on the porch floor and bellowed. "Get out of here! Go find your wife!"

Dudley backed down to the bottom step. He would as soon have put a foot on the porch with an angry lion waiting for him as to step within reach of Asper's cane. "I tell you there is danger!" Asper sank back into the chair and mopped his forehead with a red silk handkerchief.

"I'll ride right out and fetch her in," Dudley promised. He was about to reach for his saddle horn when Swergin came thundering around the corner of the building.

The timber boss was dusty and his face was streaked with perspiration. He leaped from his horse and lumbered up the steps. Something in his manner made Dudley and old Asper both come to attention.

"What's the matter now?" Asper grunted, half afraid to ask.

"What's up?" Dudley cut in.

"Your wife's horse, the roan, came in with an empty saddle for an hour ago," Swergin grunted.

"And Ball?" Asper was on his feet, the heavy cane forgotten.

"He got away clean. Sneaked through the lines," Swergin mopped his forehead with a grimy hand.

Asper remained speechless for a full minute. Dudley pulled at the handle of his quirt and stared at Swergin.

"What in Sam Hill did you let her ride out for?" Swergin almost shouted. "Didn't I give orders?" He halted before the look in Asper Delo's eyes.

"I'm taking charge of this right now! Get me 10 good men," Asper rumbled. The rage had left his voice and it was hard and cold now.

Swergin opened his mouth but it was Dudley who spoke. "You can't do that, sir. You're not able."

"Not able?" Asper's eyes measured Dudley Winters. "I'm more able than you look!" He took a step toward Dudley. "Get out of my sight. Look at you—as slick as a button after being out chasing a killer like Ball all afternoon!" He advanced toward the steps. "Get me those men and come along yourself," he snapped at Swergin.

The timber boss retreated down the steps and headed for the corral. Dudley mounted his horse without a word and trotted the animal down toward the corral.

Wrathfully Asper watched him go. "A fine son-in-law you turned out to be!" he muttered. "Riding down to the barn when you ought to be raring into the hills this minute." He sat down on the top step to wait the coming of the men.

Swergin got a crew together in a short time. Asper checked the men over as they lined up at the foot of the steps. Dudley was not with them, but he had expected that.

"Ball has made off with my daughter. I'll give $1,000 cash for her safe return and another $1,000 for the body of that dirty coyote—dead." His eyes travelled coldly over the men.

Swergin slid from his horse. "You'd better stay in camp," he said gruffly.

"Get me a horse! I'm taking charge and I'm going along. You'll take orders from me!"

Swergin turned about abruptly. "Get the boss an easy horse," he growled.

Asper found that he had trouble in mounting the horse that was brought for him but he gritted his teeth and climbed into the saddle. He was about to ride out at the head of his men when the camp doctor came running across the street.

"You must let me bandage that shoulder if you're going to act like a fool," the doctor snapped.

Asper looked the medical man over with a baleful glare. He seemed on the point of sinking his spurs and riding over the slender medic. As last he slid from the saddle and growled deeply. "Get it done in a hurry!"

The doctor bandaged the arm and shoulder tightly. He said nothing but it was plain that he thought his boss the most irresponsible lunatic he had ever attended.

Asper pulled his wool shirt back over the bandages and mounted without asking for any advice from the doctor. He faced the men and gave a short order.

"Ride after me!" With those words he struck out at a gallop in the direction of Pass Creek.

Swergin rode at his side in grim

silence. He had been in the saddle the better part of the day but he was still untired and he looked as grim as Asper himself.

They rode deep into the timber in a zig-zag course. It was Asper's plan to pick up Ball's trail and to track him to his hiding place. He forged ahead at a killing pace, the steep slope cutting the wind of his horse and dropping out two of the less powerful saddlers. The others were streaked with Luther when he finally called a halt. Not a sign of a fresh track had they crossed though they had ranged from the lowest ravine to the rim of Folly Mountain.

Swergin sat on his horse with a grim smile on his lips. "You ought to be satisfied now that you can't pick up that bird's trail. You just have to waylay him."

"We have to locate his hiding place," Asper's voice was weak from the strain of riding.

"You'll never do it this way," Swergin was squinting into the sunset as though figuring the hours of light they had left.

"How will we do it then?" Asper was desperate.

"Let the men spread out and each go after that $1,000 by himself. You ride back to camp and take a rest for an hour," Swergin slapped the neck of his trembling horse. "There ain't no animal living can stand climbing on a run. You'll just kill all of our best horses."

Asper knew the timber boss was right. He nodded his head, admitting defeat, and turned his horse down the slope. "Go after him and get him! My offer still stands."

The men spread out and each took a different direction. Asper did not look at Swergin. He rode away with a dejected droop to his shoulders. This was the breaking straw. Ball had taken toll that was beyond his powers to meet. He would gladly have surrendered on any terms the cowboy offered had Ball been able to talk to him at that moment.

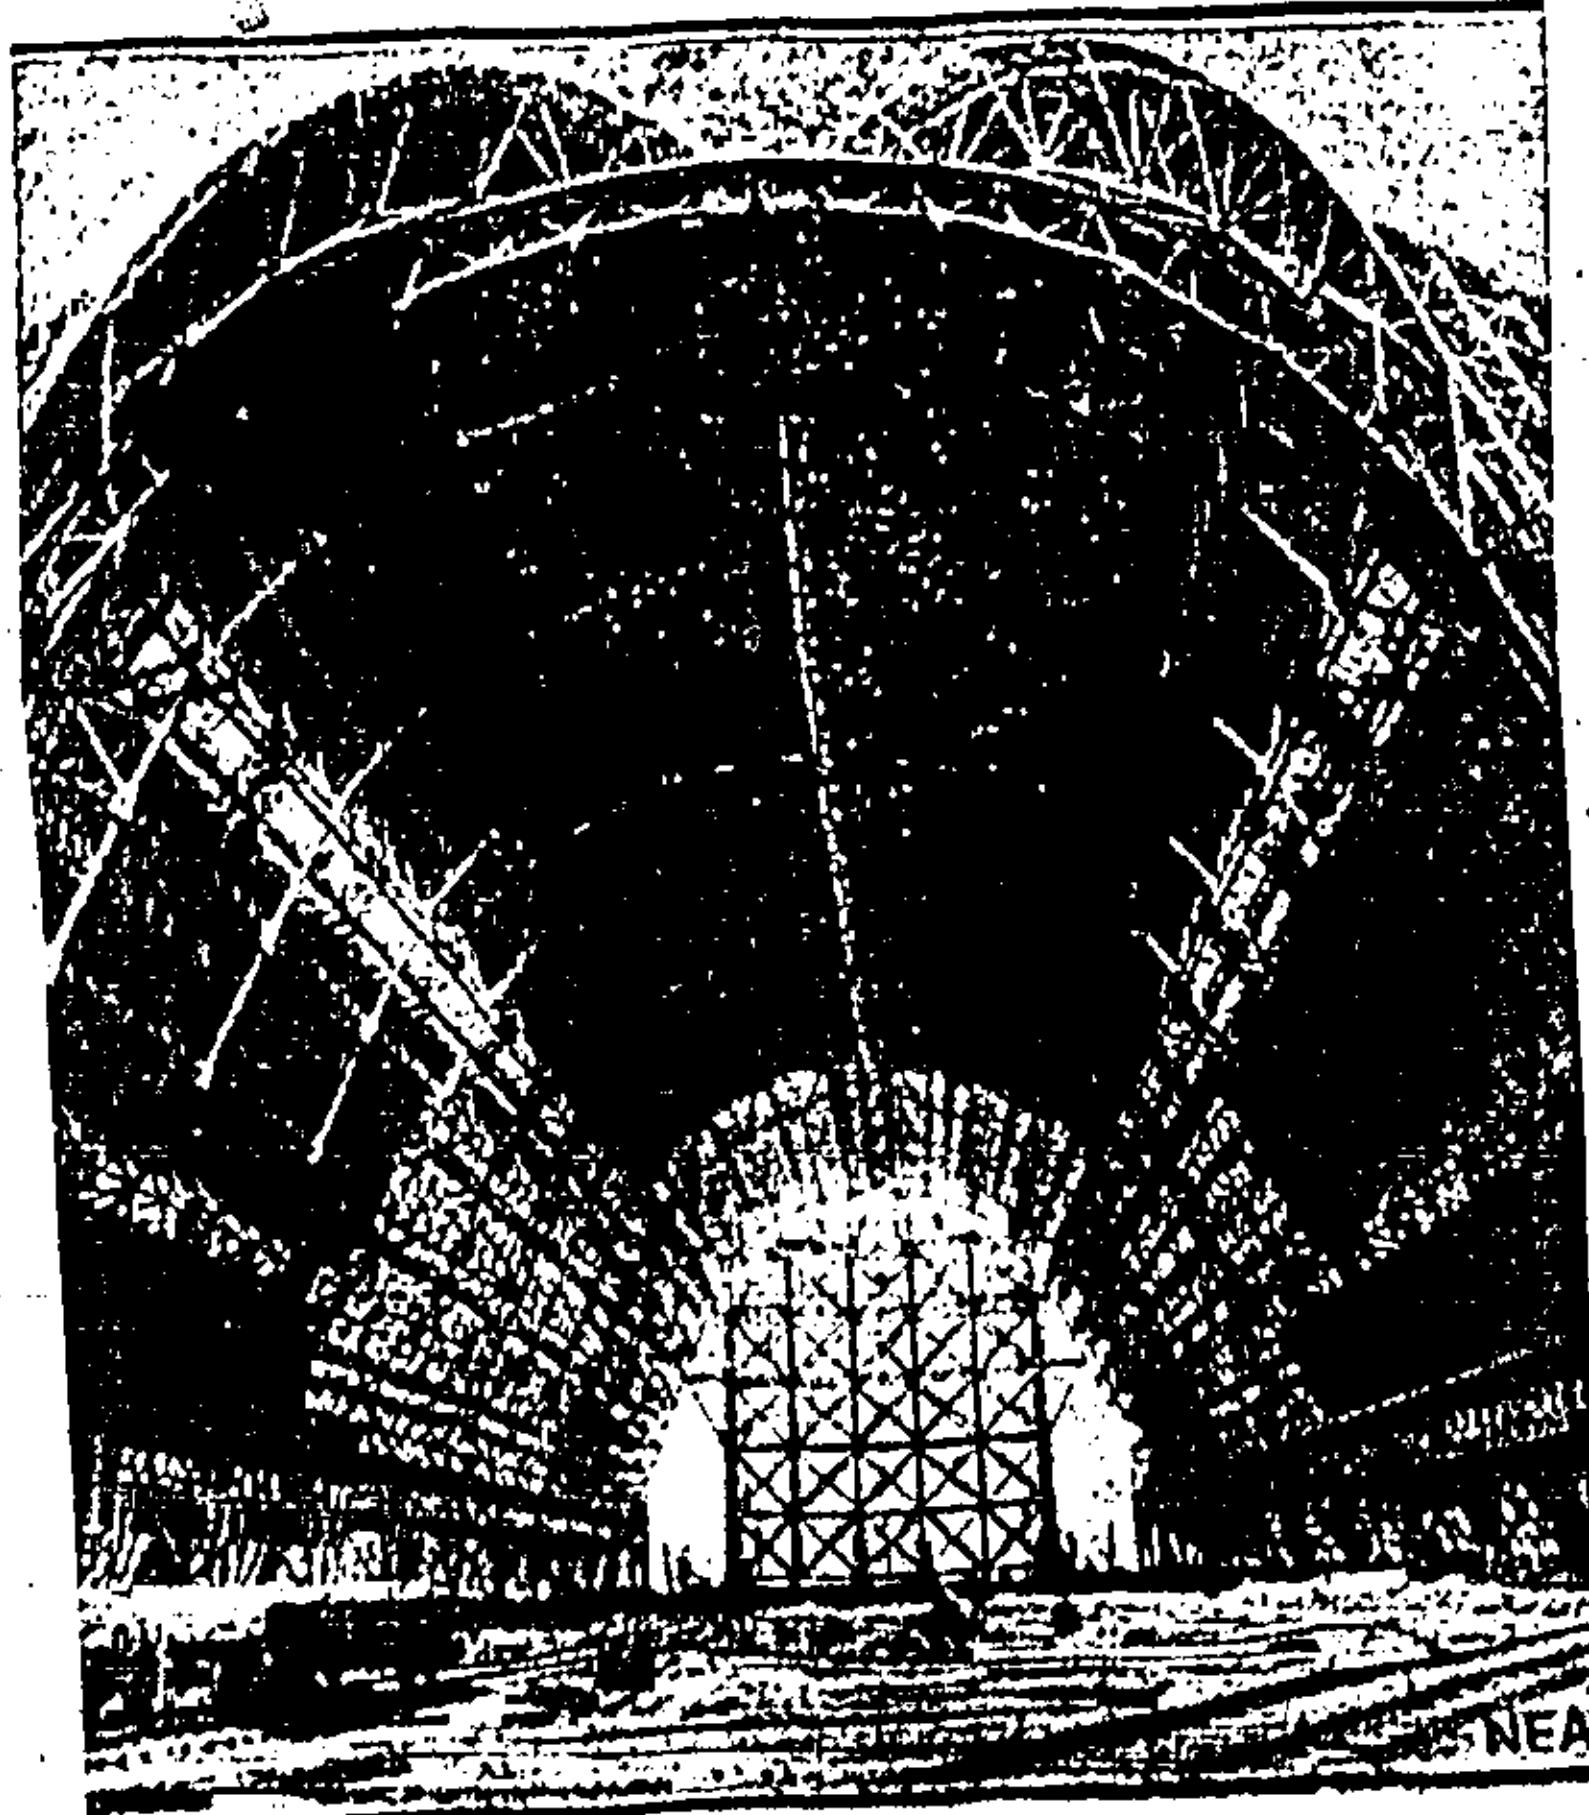

Swergin doubled back down the trail. He rode slowly and in a manner that showed he knew where he was going. He kept along the rim in a downward direction. After riding for perhaps a mile he dismounted and examined the ground in a dense growth of aspens. With a grunt he straightened up and squinted at the sun. He had found the tracks he sought but the light was falling fast. He would have to take up the trail in the morning. It would still lead where he wanted to go.

YORKSHIREMEN WIN & LOSE

BOWLS AND TENNIS WITH K.B.G.C.

VICE-PRESIDENT'S GENEROSITY

With Yorkshire winning the tennis and the Kowloon Bowling Green Club
the bowls, the return match between these teams on Saturday saw honours divided.

The contents in both games were keen, and a thoroughly enjoyable time was spent by the participants.
At the conclusion, Mr. J.G. Meyer addressed the gathering, when he gave the history of the matches between the Bowling Green and the Yorkshiremen's Society.

He added that although they very much regretted the inability of Mr. J.
Scott Harston the vice-president of the Society, to attend that day, he had generously sent along a substantial cheque towards the expenses of the afternoon. The announcement was received with applause.
Mr. E.W. Hogbin replied on behalf of the Kowloon Bowling Green, and said that despite their awful dislike, they all voted the Yorkshire-men jolly good fellows!

Joan Bonart is the centre figure

she is irresistible. The picture pre-several new angles to make it more than ordinarily interesting, having

What is Joy?

To see it is to smile,
to hear it is to laugh,
to feel it is to love,
to know it is to live,
to have it is to be happy,
to lose it is to be sad,
to find it is to be content,
to share it is to be generous,
to give it is to be kind,
to receive it is to be grateful,
to be it is to be perfect.

SIGNIFICANT!

IN his opening lecture to students
of the class in advertising at Heriot-Watt College, Mr. R. McKean, referred to a famous merchant who had realized that the number of buyers he could reach by the personal salesmanship of his staff was strictly limited. Trying to get a large number of new customers
by means of the Post was too costly.
So he was coming back to Press
Advertising, especially for new customers,
as he found that after all, Press
Advertising was the quickest and cheapest way to secure a great many new customers.

There are dozens of advertising
schemes, but only Press Advertising takes the message into the home every day!
AND it is well to remember that Press
Advertising does assist the customer
— the newspaper is a business directory
read every day — because it changes
every day!

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

From a Dress Show.

A wide band of ribbed woollen knitting, like a stocking top—the newest idea for sports caps in Paris. The band is so wide that the top has a decidedly jaunty tilt. There is no crown, the head being open to the air. The new cap is worn slightly on one side.

A more formal variation has the top filled in with a circle of fur, which, being heavier than the wool, makes the top fall over a little.

Fine Shetland wool used for some of the newest sports blouses which are tucked inside the skirt. The blouse itself is perfectly plain, but the design follows the style of some of the old Shetland shawls.

A new "neckwear" idea introduced by a young London designer—a miniature Shetland wool shawl, half in black and half in white, worn as a scarf on the square decolleté in front.

A black crepe apron worn over a black lace evening dress and tying in a large bow at the back of the skirt.

Little round black astrakhan caps with a bouquet of flowers placed in front and small round astrakhan capes to match.

Hip capes trimmed with several bands of magnificent fox fur placed so closely together that the material is hardly visible between them.

Evening dresses of satin are with a peculiar dull brilliance which gives the mannequin the effect of having been out in a shower of rain.

Russian embroidery on morning frocks, done in tiny red beads instead of silk.

Curious fastenings on coats and jackets composed of large round

"buttons" with hollow centres sewn over a corresponding hole in the material. "Booths" cords with long metal tags are pulled through these from the opposing side, and tied.

New type of trimming made of thick curls of flimsy silk used on evening jackets, gauntlet gloves, and outlining the decolletés of evening dresses.

Three fox scarves joined together by large metal rings.

A very abbreviated evening jacket, which is really only a band of material with full puff elbow sleeves. When this is slipped on it looks part of the frock.

Knitted roll collars in two or three different colours on morning frocks, with belts to match.

"MAKE YOUR HAIR BEAUTIFUL!"

(By a Beauty Expert)

The hair changes with the seasons. It is therefore, not surprising to learn that the hairdressing saloons are now full of women who are anxious to retrieve the hair's lost attractiveness.

The connexion between health and appearance cannot be over-emphasized, particularly in relation to the hair.

Brittle, lifeless, and colourless hair is frequently caused by anaemia and, nerves, so there is often need for blood-forming foods and tonics in addition to the external treatment. Diet is a big factor.

Under-nourished nerves, for example, will readily cause premature greyness and brittle, lustreless hair while excessively greasy hair generally points to over-acidity. Thus, to correct the former a nourishing diet should be taken. Plenty of sleep, rest, and fresh air is also required to feed and soothe the over-strained nerves. On the other hand, acidity of the system can only be overcome by a corrective medicine and careful dietary.

Scalp Treatment

Now for the scalp treatment. The finest treatment for the hair is plenty of brushwork—regular daily brushing. Unfortunately, few heads get enough. These are the days of curls and waves, and they seem to have ousted the hair brush, many women fearing to brush the hair very thoroughly because of scaring the waves away. As a matter of fact, well brushed healthy hair holds a certain amount of electricity, and this is easier to wave.

So go ahead with your brushing. Brush thoroughly, then spray a little setting lotion over, and finally fix the combs or waves in the desired position. The result will convince you that brushing attracts the waves rather than otherwise.

If the hair is of dry texture rub in a tablespoonful of warm olive oil before the fortnightly shampoo, and use a little brilliantine after dressing the hair. For preference, use the "egg and olive oil" shampoo—a mixture both nutritious and cleansing.

Massage is splendid for the hair, for it stimulates the glands under the scalp, and so feeds the hair. Five minutes of these movements, night and morning, is the finest tonic imaginable to tired, faded hair.

Speaking of tonics, some of the simplest mixtures are the most effective. The following is good for dry hair—Half an ounce of liquid paraffin (the medicinal variety) and four ounces of cheap eau-de-Cologne. For greasy hair, an astringent mixture is required. A mixture of bay rum, cantharides, and rosemary is as good as anything, and can be inexpensively mixed up at any chemist's.

PARISIAN NOTES.

The New Green.

A word about colours. As everyone knows, Paris invents a new colour each season, that is to say for spring summer, autumn and winter.

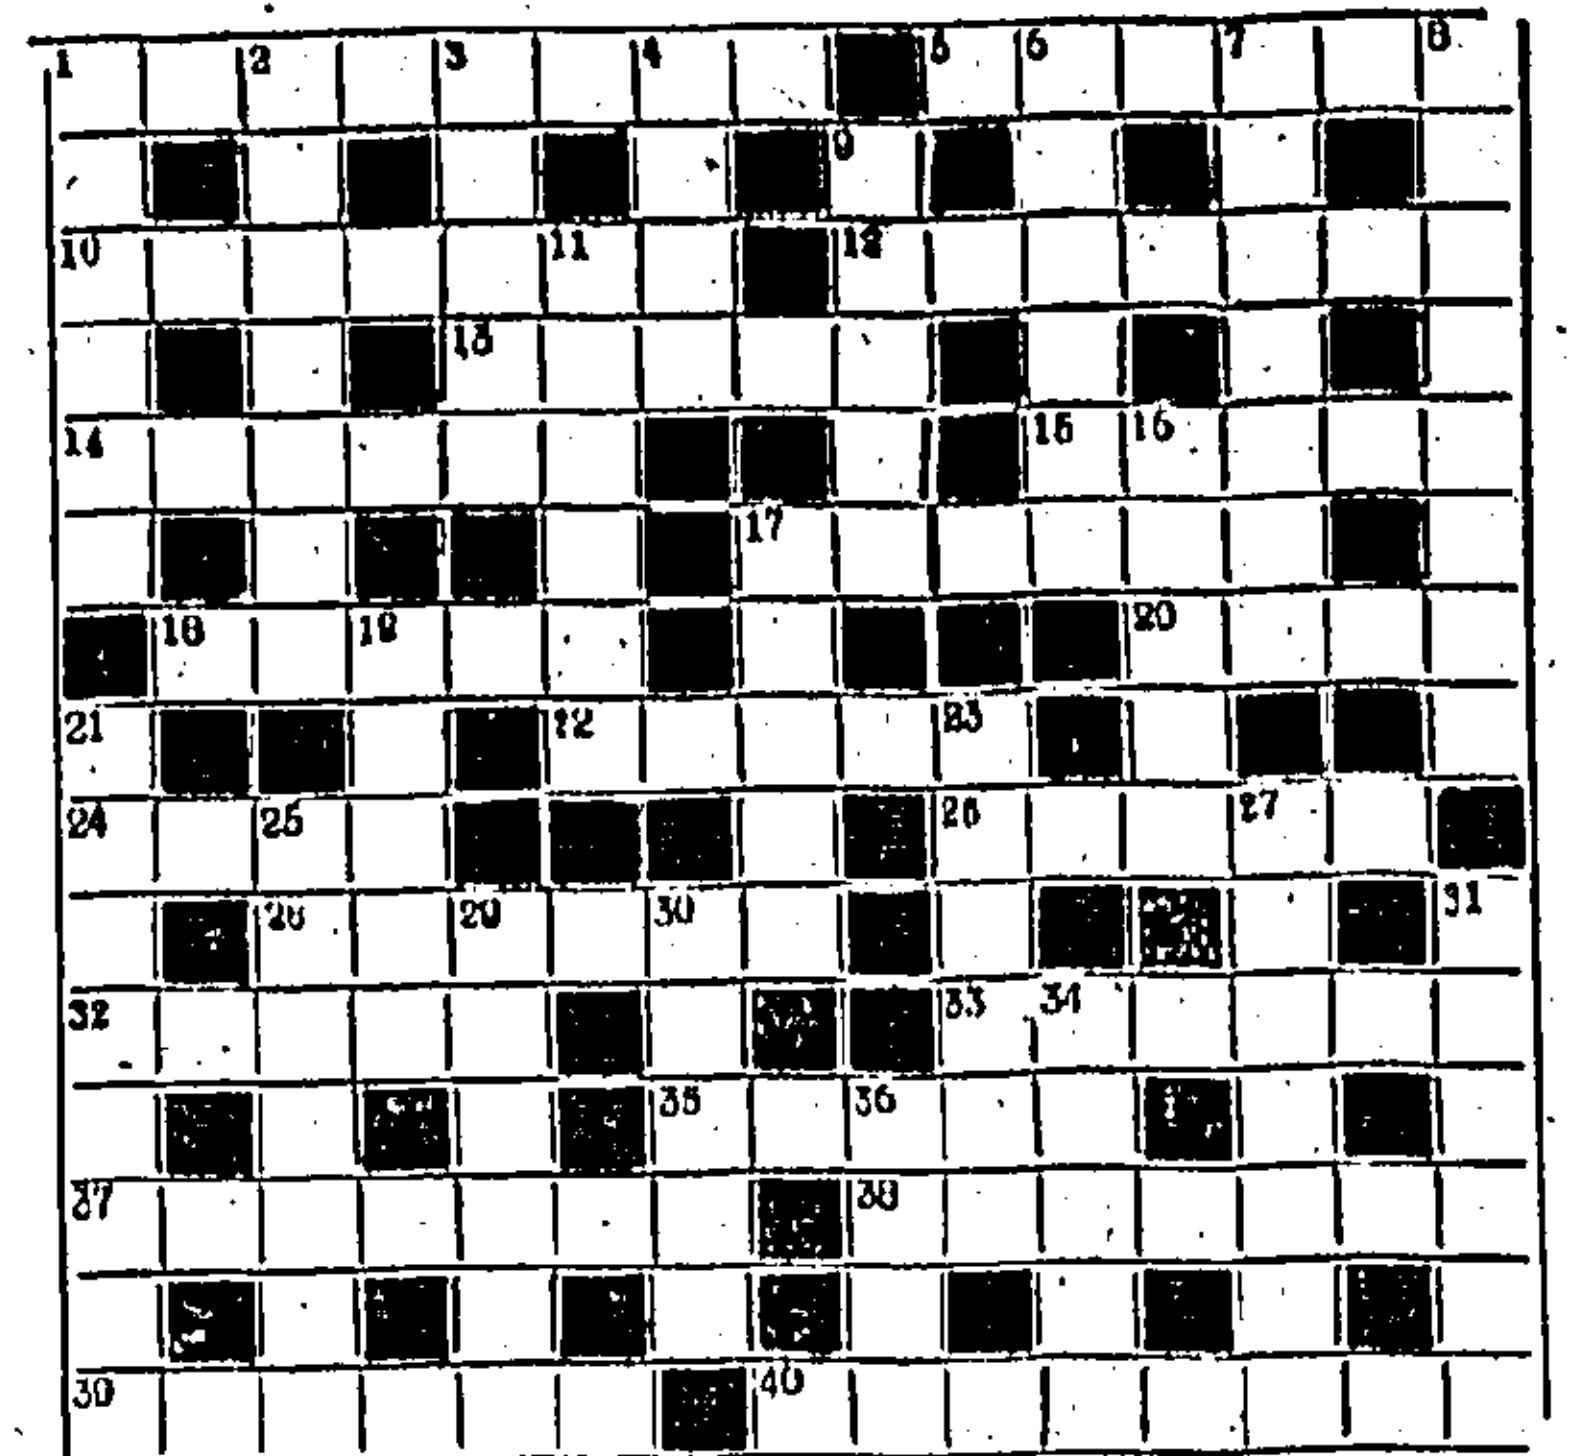

For the autumn of 1932, Paris presents us with a deep and lovely green with a good deal of yellow in it. And for fear of lingering superstition prejudicing women against it, Paris has taken counsel of the most authoritative chiro-manentenne, and has learned that this new green—because it is a yellow green—has protective astral influences, so that the wearer of it may be assured of happiness and good luck! In any case it is a superb shade, and becoming alike to fair and dark women, and particularly to the red-haired.

Some red-haired women looked quite lovely at the Casino at Deauville, in frocks and ensembles of this new green which set off their beauty to perfection. For the rest, marine-blue is an important colour, together with coral, geranium, white, and a striking "astrakhan" beige.

For yachting and for jaunts in speed boats, there are trousers of white cloth worn with a tuck-in shirt of heavy silk and a mannish tailored jacket of dark blue or dark red cloth.

Some of these suits are consciously amusing as, for instance a white suit cut like a mechanic's overall, or a Mexican suit with flared trousers. The majority, however, are plain and practical, serving their purpose admirably.

HOUSE OF LORDS REFORM

Although not a burning question at the moment, House of Lords reform is destined to receive considerable attention in the relatively near future. Although figuring in party programmes for some years past, the issue has remained largely dormant, due in great measure to matters of greater urgency and moment demanding consideration. In any event, the problem has not dominated politics since the powers of the Upper Chamber were considerably restricted and modified by the Parliament Act of 1911 to anything like the extent that it did before the passing of that enactment. Even so, it has long been felt that the Parliament Act by no means represented the full extent to which reform was called for, and the position has thus been left in a rather unsatisfactory state. Not only have Liberals and Labourists kept in mind the need of further overhaul, but the Conservatives also have realised that the time must come when further changes will have to be made. Hence the recent recommendations by a body of Conservative Peers and Commonsers which aim at a cutting down of the numerical strength of the Second Chamber, a recognition of the elective principle, and the possible admission of lady members.

It is interesting now to recall some ideas which were advanced several years ago by Professor L. T. Hobhouse, in his work on "Liberalism," as to the wisest lines on which to proceed with reform of the House of Lords. These envisaged as a real need an impartial Second Chamber distinctly subordinate to the House of Commons, incapable of overthrowing a Ministry, but able to secure the submission of a man-sure either to the direct vote of the people or to the verdict of a second election—the Government of the day having the choice between the alternatives. Such a Chamber might be instituted by direct popular election, although the multiplicity of elections might not be good for democracy, and it would be difficult to reconcile a directly-elected House to a subordinate position. Thus the idea was advanced by Professor Hobhouse that, as an alternative, the Chamber might be elected on a proportional system by the House of Commons itself, its members retaining their seats for two Parliaments. To bridge over the change, half of the Chamber for the existing Parliament might, it was suggested, be elected by the existing House of Lords, and their representatives retiring at the end of Parliament would leave the next House of Commons, and every future House, with one-half of the Chamber to elect. The merit of this scheme was that the Second Chamber would then reflect in equal proportions the existing and the last House of Commons, and the balance between parties should therefore be fairly held. Such an Upper House would have ample power of securing reasonable amendments to measures which came before it, and would most likely be careful to exercise moderation in pressing its views.

When we come down to bed-rock, however, these matters of form are of secondary importance. As Professor Hobson himself has expressed it, we need in these matters less of the fanatics of sectarianism and more of the unifying mind. Our reformers must learn to rely less on the advertising value of immediate success, and more on the deeper but less striking changes of practice or of feeling, to think less of catching votes and more of convincing opinion. We need a fuller co-operation among those of genuine democratic feeling, by whatever name they are labelled, and more agreement as to the order of reform. Given this, there is every reason to hope and believe that English constitutional changes can be devised along lines adapted to the real needs of the times, whatever they may be.

A Man Without a Country.

The march of the years and the growth of the Bolshevik movement from a radical theory to a recognisable form of government, have not lessened foreign fears of the once-dynamic man who, with Lenin, ruled Russia after the Revolution. The recent action of Czechoslovakia in refusing admittance to Trotsky added yet another to the list of countries that have barred him and made him famous as the modern counterpart of "The Man Without a Country." Since Stalin made himself the uncontested master of Russia, Trotsky has been living in exile in the dull Prinkipo Islands near Istanbul. Stalin's agents, after having taken Trotsky into exile in a remote village in Turkestan, still considered him dangerous so they gave him further marching orders in 1929 and Mustapha Kemal allowed him to live in Prinkipo. He at once set about trying to get permission to live elsewhere. First he applied to Germany. The once-arrogant head of the Red Army applied in most humble terms. He guaranteed he would live in complete isolation outside of Berlin, would in no case present himself at public meetings, and in his writings would conform strictly to the regulations of German laws on the subject. The governmental officials said they did not think Trotsky was so sick that he needed German doctors and German waters. Trotsky then applied to Norway. There was a big debate in the Diet. The head of the police expressed grave fears that Trotsky might be assassinated. Norway rejected him. He turned to France. The French government said the expulsion order, whereby he had been sent out of France, was still on the books.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Senior, will join her son, Governor General Theodore Roosevelt, in Manila on January 2, 1933. In a cable received by the Governor General he is advised that his mother is sailing from Seattle on December 30.

A wedding of interest to the Chinese community was solemnised at the Union Church, Kowloon, on Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Paul Au and Miss Moo Yin Pang were married by the Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen. The bridegroom recently returned from the United States, where he has been for several years.

His Excellency the Chancellor will preside at the next congregation of the Hongkong University, which will be held at 5 p.m. on Monday, January 9, 1933. His Excellency has very kindly agreed to preside at the opening ceremony of the Fung Ping Shan Library at 4.30 p.m. on Wednesday, December 14, 1932.

The speaker at the Rotary Club dinner to-morrow will be Rotarian Walter Brown, M.A., B.Sc., who will speak on "A Trip to Samoa." After a full discussion at the last meeting it was decided by majority vote to hold future meetings in Gloucester Building, beginning with Tuesday, November 22. A motion was carried by acclamation that a letter be addressed to Messrs. Lane, Crawford & Co., thanking them for the excellent service they had rendered to the Club since its formation.

The health bulletin for Eastern ports for the week ended November 12, shows the following cases of infectious diseases and deaths therefrom.—Plague, Beirut 2 cases, Rangoon one case, Colombo 2 cases, one death. Cholera, Bombay one case, Calcutta 29 cases 3 deaths, Alexandria 6 cases 3 deaths, Baghdad 3 cases, Basrah 29 cases 13 deaths, Bombay 12 cases 3 deaths, Calcutta 10 cases 5 deaths, Madras 38 cases 13 deaths, Nagapattinam one death, Rangoon one case, Tuticorin 3 cases one death, Saigon one case one death, and Canton 13 cases.

Then he turned to England, famous as a country which has given asylum to political exiles. The Labour government was in power. But Mr. Clynes, refused to let Trotsky go to England. Recently his health became so bad that in desperation he applied to the government of Czechoslovakia for permission to take the waters at Piatyran Spa in Slovakia. The Czech cabinet finally refused and when Trotsky had almost given up in despair, he suddenly found that Denmark was prepared to have him as a temporary guest and he sailed last week for Marzelle. There must be a moral in his story somewhere.

"Patience, dear! Let's wait until the game begins."

ARE WE LOSING OUR LAUGHTER?

By "SENTINEL"

A PHILOSOPHIC STUDENT of human nature assured me the other day that Englishmen are losing the faculty of humour. We no longer produce original jests or appreciate them, he insisted, and what Hobbes called the "sudden glory" of laughter is far less frequent than it was twenty or even ten years ago. With the exception of Mr. Wodehouse, who is merely the literary equivalent of a knock-about low comedian with some knowledge of English and American slang (his criticism, not mine) we have not given the English-speaking world a master of merriment for a whole generation. There have been no successors to Edward Lear and Lewis Carroll and W. S. Gilbert, who were the descendants of Mother Goose, and, like her, could create elemental nonsense—the real nonsense which resembles music in that it has no meaning outside itself.

It is true that little volumes of humorous verse often appear as Christmas approaches. The versifiers of Mr. Punch's School, who may perhaps be described as Sir Owen Seaman's pupils, are always virtuous in their way. But, even with the help of clever illustrators, do they elicit those loud gusts of laughter which purge the mind of melancholy? As for the comic rhymes for children, which are prepared for the Christmas trade in gift-books, they never seem to catch on in the nursery—except as materials for building palaces or prisons for the family cat.

They never attain the popularity of Mother Goose's "Barber, barber, shave a pig," or her lamentable legend of Dr. Foster's journey. And for children of all ages, from eight to eighty, the cunningly wrought light verse of to-day is never as mirth-provoking as Lear's Old Man of Thermopylae who never did anything properly, or the proposal of Gilbert's Captain Reece to the little old mother of his Boson:

And does it want a wedding ring?
It was a tempting ickle sing.
(I never look at the accompanying picture without emitting a sudden hoot of laughter) or any of Lewis Carroll's essays in word-creation, which is the very essence of nonsense verse.

The greatest of these three good-humourists was Edward Lear, and I was surprised to find him left out of "Great Victorians," though well aware that the modern steep-browed as well as the no-browed do not care for his stuff. Though he did not hit upon the portmanteau idea (that was Lewis Carroll's discovery) he is unrivalled as a word-juggler. He was the equal of Byron and Browning in the making of triple rhymes, as in the following example:

There was an old Lady of Winchester
Who said, if you needle or pin shall see
His trick of coupling a serious word with an absurd invention, as in "quite galeobious and gentel," affects me as would the sight of an Archbishop entering the House of Lords with a green toy-balloon on a string. And who but he would ever have thought of ending a complimentary letter with the "ombliferous" phrases: "Yours absquiously and full of blomphous and unphisidous congratulation?"

"It has come to this," complained the philosopher I have been quoting, "that we must now depend on America for a supply of original humour." Certainly the American humorist has added to the gaiety of this nation in the further and nearer past. Mark Twain, for example, belongs as much to us as to his compatriots. The only time I ever met him, on one of his infrequent visits to this country, he confessed to feeling a little depressed, owing to "seeing too much damp scenery." But he became livelier in the course of conversation, and quoted an amusing remark by his wife (which I have clean forgotten) adding: "And I don't suppose she has made half-a-dozen jokes in her whole life." Being married to a world's jester must make for seriousness.

C. G. Leland, the inventor of Hans Breitmann and his immortal "Darty" where:

De gompany sighted mit dable-legs
Till de constable made 'em stop was another benefactor to all those for whom, to adapt Blake's famous line, a laugh is an intellectual thing. It would not advocate a Tariff on foreign-made humour which would exclude the joyous jestings of such American exports, even though it might improve the financial status of Stephen Leacock, manifestly Mark Twain's successor, and other Canadian humorists.

Besides, Canada has held her own as a purveyor of original humour ever since Judge Halliburton created "Sam Slick" with his wooden nutmegs, now universally accepted as the typical Yankee inventor of "notions" made to sell. And in the late W. H. Drummond, who caused the French habitant to tell us all about himself in his own quaint broken English, she has given us something more than an "opposite number" to Leland—one of those rare humorists, in truth, who seem to have grown up naturally out of the kindly soil, like a tree blossoming to fruition. There is a line in his description of the sudden arrival of spring in the Laurentian land:

And everything crazy all over de place, which is always running in my mind, when the dark dank days of winter are about to depart.

Nor would I exclude by means of ad valorem import duties (our fiscal Cerebus would find them difficult indeed to compute) such recently-published provocations to laughter from the United States as "The Specialist" and "Hard Lines." Ogden Nash, the author of the last-named book, is one of the few versifiers with the uncommon sense required for writing real nonsense. I find his deliberately false rhymes as amusing at times as Lear's. Thus in his "Hymn to the Sun and Myself," the young man who is celebrating his arrival at the age of 27½ and congratulating himself on being privileged to be alive and do some of the work of the world from nine to five, is glad to think he has been "naturalier and naturalier" with his girl and "so has succeeded in remaining a 'careless natural.'" It recalls the pleasing popular song, in which they all cried "Warrior!" and "Freda," and is perhaps a subtle skit on our slovenly habits of slurred speech.

He sometimes produces spoof aphorisms such as:

A good way to forget to-day's sorrows
Is by thinking hard about to-morrow's and:
A girl whose lips are covered with paint
Has an advantage with me over one whose ain't
(which is true, unfortunately) and:

Among the anthropophagi
People's friends are people's sarcophagi.

It is all nonsense, with at times a little flavouring of common-sense, and if you do not love the nonsensical, you will not even smile at it.

It may be true, however, that we are not losing our faculty of humour but developing a more subtle sense of what is worth laughing at. Such is the contention of some celebrated authorities on the theatre and the cinema whom I have been consulting over the telephone. They are all convinced that the British public is too fastidious nowadays to be amused at the "crude comedy" of Marie Lloyd, or even of that much more ample personality, Bessie Bellwood, who could hold the biggest audience in the hollow of her hand. The "Lion Comique" of the old days, I am also assured, would be far too leonine for the varieties of to-day. I used to say the same sort of thing thirty years ago to

"The evidence which will be produced will be that of the man who offered the bribe and from whom it was obtained. He would say he was handling the opium when accused came in and took the opium from him, laid it on the table and left the cubicle. That was the evidence of the man who was liable to be accused of a serious crime.

DETECTIVE'S ADMISSION.

CORRESPONDENCE.

An Island Incident.

[To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.]

Sir,—A message from one of the Chinese press agencies reproduced in your columns, regarding the alleged arrest by the Macao police of a man who was carrying out a survey on an island near Macao, calls for comment.

To understand the question, it must be known that the right of tenure as regards the island referred to, with two others, has never been settled ever since the Sino-Portuguese Treaty of 1887. The inhabitants, moreover, live on the most friendly terms with the Portuguese from whom they have received many favours, arms and ammunition and funds to equip themselves against pirate attacks, and money for the establishment of schools and a leprosy hospital, the lepers receiving medical treatment from the Portuguese from time to time.

It happened that a Chinese surveyor went to the island referred to, to carry out surveys, because of a dispute between two Chinese in connexion with some private property (and not for international boundary limits as the message referred to tries to make out) and failed to advise the Portuguese of his visit to the island. The villagers, who look upon all strangers with suspicion, promptly notified the nearest police, who happened to be the Portuguese, and the surveyor was requested to present his credentials to the Macao authorities. This he did and then retired to Shekki. He was never arrested by the Portuguese, and there never was a trial, much less a court martial as the message tries to make out.

Almost immediately afterwards, however, a number of students at Shekki took up the matter and, by distortion of the facts of the case, have been trying to stir up trouble. Mr. Tong Shao-yi was invited by some Chinese (not by the Portuguese) to look into the question, and he is reported to have been busy in Canton examining the files relating to the islands.

No less an authority than Mr. Chiu Siu-tan, Commissioner of Foreign Affairs in Canton, in an interview, which was published in the Wah Tsz Yat Po on the 14th inst. declared:—"Macao has lent materials to the inhabitants of those islands to defend themselves against attacks of pirates, and has given money for the establishment of schools, and has helped the inhabitants of that locality in other ways. Because of this there seem to be people who believe that the Portuguese are desirous of taking possession of those islands. The Portuguese, explaining the case to us, declare that they have no intention of taking any of our territory, and I believe their statement."

He concluded by saying, "I look forward to the time when the Nanking Government will nominate a special delegate to establish the limits definitely with a delegate from the Portuguese government, so that the dispute will be settled once and for all."

The Chinese people are seeking the friendship and good will of other nations, and irresponsible students should not be permitted to interfere in matters that are beyond their capabilities. It is a poor commentary on the methods of some of the teachers who would be better occupied in preparing their pupils for a useful life instead of stirring up trouble by lying and mischievous propaganda.

It is sincerely to be hoped that those best able to settle international disputes be left to do so and that students be sent back to their books.—Yours, etc., J. A. K.

Evidence was then called, and the hearing is proceeding.

Needle Match Won by Aston Villa

London, Nov. 19. Aston Villa's amazing win over the Arsenal at Villa Park by five goals to three was victory for the old style of science over the new. There was an approximate attendance of 60,000 spectators who saw a great game played between these two teams.

Chelsea in their match at Stamford Bridge against Wednesday were followed by J. H. Brown, the visiting goal keeper, to whom the Sheffield team owed much for a lucky victory. W. Evans performed the "hat trick" for Tottenham Hotspurs, who beat Chesterfield by 4-1.

After being two goals down Leeds fought back gamely and forced a draw against Portsmouth at Fratton Park.

Brentford were completely outplayed in their first defeat.—Our Own Correspondent.

Y.M.C.A. Play Match With H.M.S. Keppel.

A water-polo team from the European Y.M.C.A. was the guest of H.M.S. Keppel yesterday, when a game was played alongside the destroyer at Taiipo before a large crowd including the ship's complement.

The Keppel turned out a strong team and gave the Y.M.C.A. a hard fight, the final scores being four-three in favour of the Y.M.C.A. Campbell and Goldman scored two goals each for the visitors and Rowlands, Rows and Hutton were the Keppel scorers. Capt. Burnett of the Keppel refereed the match.

After the game, the visitors were entertained at tea on board and enjoyed a pleasant outing.

By overshadowing the individualistic accomplishments of these players was the delightful team work of the whole side which resolved itself into machine-like movements, with the players positioning themselves for return passes, forwards and halves moving together, all to put into effect a plan of attack perfectly understood by the whole team.

One need say little of the play. In the first half it was all Combined Chinese swarming round the Interporters goal, and scoring when a real opportunity presented itself. Tam Kong-pak put three beauties past Rodgers in the first twenty minutes and before the Interporters could re-talitate from a penalty through Suen, Ip Pak-wa had added a fourth.

Suen Kam-shun was lucky to score from the spot kick, his first shot being yards wide, but the referee gave him a second chance through an infringement on the part of Lim, the Chinese goalkeeper.

Play deteriorated in the second half, the Chinese being inclined to rest on their laurels, but still perfectly capable of withstanding any challenge from the opposition.

Suen should have reduced the lead when he was presented with another penalty, but he shot badly and Lim saved with ease. In a bad light, the same player netted the losers' second point with a very neat shot.

NEW ORCESTRA LAUNCHED

SIR T. BEECHAM'S TRIUMPH

A brilliant, an amazingly brilliant, concert at Queen's Hall launched the Royal Philharmonic Society's 121st season, and the career of the new London Philharmonic Orchestra.

It touches on the miraculous that Sir Thomas Beecham should have succeeded in collecting within a few months this band of 105 players, all British, and have brought them, at their first appearance, to the point of performing in a way that places them in the front rank of the orchestras of the world.

We asked after the dazzling opening piece (the "Carnaval Roman") Who else could have done it, and where? This is an astonishing country. Be it added that nowhere else in the world would there have been so poorish an audience for such an occasion.

BEST OF THE EVENING.

The playing throughout the evening was bright, clear, elegant, and spirited. One soloist after another known and unknown, distinguished himself—Mr. H. S. Green in the Berlioz piece, then the matchless Leon Goossens near the beginning of the "Prague" symphony.

The most lovely playing of the evening was in Delius's "Brigg Fair," which was musical magic; the most superb was in "Heldenleben." It was like Beecham to launch a new orchestra with one of the hardest show-pieces of the repertoire. Well, "Heldenleben" has never sounded more lucid or more musical.

The young leader, Mr. Paul Beard, who comes from Birmingham, proved himself extraordinarily accomplished. He played the violin cadenza with subdued fantasy, but in a quiet way, most exquisitely.

To show that one was not too much captivated to manage a little fault finding he said that Sir Thomas's "andante" in the Mozart was more like "adagio."

The Philharmonic Society, which was moribund, is alive again, and London has the prospect of the most brilliant season of orchestral music it has ever known.

Mr. P. O. Elliot, credit manager of the Texas Company, arrived here from Manila by the President McKinley, accompanied by his wife.

INTERPORTERS NOW DEPENDING ON FORLORN HOPE

Navy Again Triumph

CLUB BACKS CAUSE OF RUGBY DEFEAT

Opportunities Missed by the Dozens

ROBERTS SHADOWED

(By "Fly Half")

Navy 9 pts.
Club 3 pts.

The Club had out a much stronger side than on the previous Saturday when they beat the Army, and had great hopes of turning the tables on their opponents, who had won the first match. Grievous, the old Interporter, who has been out of the game for a long while, made a welcome re-appearance at full back, and Bradford and Kerr returned to strengthen the pack. Selby, though much better, was still unable to take his place, but the club had the assistance of John Roberts, the Welsh international, who turned out at centre three-quarter. The Navy seemed to have out their strongest possible side, with Buckley, the Cheviot County centre again at full back, and Ryder appearing for the first time after his injury, at centre. Armytage being in Ryder's old place at fly half.

NAVY OPEN SCORING. With conditions perfect, if rather warm, McEldan again won the toss and set the Navy to face a strong sun which shone straight down the field. The Navy did the pressing in the early stages and following a rush down the touchline in which several of their forwards took part, opened the scoring through Buckley, who picked up a few yards from the line and dived over. Doggett sliced his kick at goal.

After this the Club played up harder, and following a good movement by the backs Ferguson scored a magnificent try, running very powerfully and swerving inwards at the exact moment to find the Navy defence on the edge of the line. McEldan's kick went no near that the touch judges signalled a goal but the referee disallowed it, correctly I think, as the ball seemed to pass about six inches outside the post.

SET SCRUM SUPERIORITY. Both sides pressed in turn, the Navy club having the advantage in the line-outs and in the loose, but the Club being immensely superior in the set scrums, especially after they reverted to the old formation with Kerr (who was not a success at wing forward) and Bradford at goal. The forwards were erratic though Ryder was as dangerous as ever when he had ball, and half time arrived with no further score.

The second half saw the Navy take the lead through a ball kicked on the part of Grievous, who misjudged a long kick ahead and when hard pressed kicked the ball straight to Doggett who was standing unmarked on the touchline and had nothing to do but run straight to score in the corner. He again sliced his kick at goal. Following this further reverse, the Club played up gallantly, and McEldan pressed home the advantage in the set scrums by taking a scrum instead of a line-out whenever possible.

MAGNIFICENT HOOKING. At this stage, McEldan was hooking magnificently, and the ball came back from the Club side of the scrum with monotonous regularity. Macintosh, though badly harassed by Hubback, gave Turner a good service, but from that point nothing would go right. The passing was atrocious and the positioning both in attack and defence equally bad, so that in nearly every case the backs lost ground, when, had they been playing normally well, they would have been hammering repeatedly at the Navy line.

The Navy defence was as usual excellent, but nothing could condone the pitifully inept Club attack. It was not surprising to find the Navy scoring again, Armytage breaking through and Rothwell scoring in the corner. Buckley made a good shot at goal but was short.

The Club continued to get the ball but could do nothing right though they went very close when McEldan short punted across from a free kick and Ferguson gathered and ran strongly to be brought down just short of the line. McEldan and McEldan were also prominent at this stage when the forwards made strenuous efforts to get through themselves, but without avail. No side came with the Navy still holding their six points lead.

POOR CLUB BACKS. As I left the match, I could not but feel that the Club had every reason to be thoroughly disappointed over the result. In the second half especially, the pack got the ball from nearly every scrum, and the backs had enough chances to have scored half a dozen tries against any defence. Instead of driving home their advantage, however, they completely threw it away and could do nothing right at all. Not once during the game did they move as a line. They time their passes badly and were seldom in position to receive them. They either passed much too soon or tried to cut through a run right into trouble.

A TYPICAL scrum in the Navy v. Club rugby match on Saturday. The Club, although vastly superior in this department, were defeated mainly through the weakness of the backs. (Photo: Ming Yuen).

In defence the lack of understanding and positioning was equally evident and if the Navy backs had had the same share of the ball from the scrum I feel sure they would have run up a big score.

I feel sorry for Roberts. He found the Club backs on an off day, and when he was given a good pass he nearly always had a couple of Navy players hanging on to him like leeches. In addition he tore a ligament in his leg, and at the end of what must have been, for him, a disappointing game, he also became infected with the prevailing epidemic of bad passing.

Lammett also had an off day, being too inclined to over-run his passes, though some of the blame must go to Griffiths for not timing them properly.

FERGUSON OUTSTANDING. Apart from some good touches of Ryder, Griffiths had a most unhappy afternoon. He did not seem nearly fit, and it is hoped that next week will be his old self again. On the other wing, Ferguson was the best of the line. He scored a great try, and was often conspicuous. Grievous made one fatal mistake which led to the second Navy try, but otherwise played quite well. He does at least bring his own down if he can lay a hand on him.

Turner had a poor match. His handling, usually his strong point, was bad, and his kicking, like Griffiths, often failed to find touch, which threw extra work on the forwards. The forwards have my sympathy. Though they had to play second fiddle in the line-outs and in the loose, they gave their backs enough of the ball to have won the match twice over.

McEldan again hooked wonderfully well and I shudder to think what he would have done if he had changed sides. Bradford, as ever, was a great worker and McEldan and Miller were prominent in the loose. Hall Thompson was not as good as usual. I am told he had a strenuous morning's camp, which is not the best training for a hard game, but until he tired he worked really well.

NAVY'S SHINING LIGHTS. On the Navy side, Buckley played a beautiful game at full back. He emphasised the Club weakness in finding touch by returning the kicks with credit; his holding of the ball was perfect, and he was always coolness personified. On his showing in this match the Navy won't miss Gosling which is the highest praise I can give him.

The three-quarters were all good, with Ryder, who was running as powerfully as ever, and Rothwell, the most elusive man on the field and a beautiful tackler, perhaps the best. At half, Armytage was rather erratic. His handling was uncertain and his kicking not so good as in the previous match, but nevertheless he did many excellent things both in attack and defence. Woods at the line of the scrum shared the honours with Macintosh.

FORWARDS' DEFICIENCY. The Navy forwards as usual played a great game, but they have one pronounced weakness, which was heavily underlined by the presence of McEldan in the opposing side; they do not get the ball in the set scrums. In all other respects they are a first class pack, their line-out play is excellent, and they can give the Club many points in getting the ball back from the loose scrums and in backing up. Linton, Watson and Hubback as always, gave a polished display of winging and were the most prominent. The game was admirably refereed by Major McIntyre, R.A.

MAMAK MATCHES

[By "Bully-Off"]

Only two of the four Mamak tournament matches fixed for the week-end were played, postponements being made in the games between the 1st H.K.S. Battery and H.M.S. Parthian, by reason of the fact that the Parthian was out of port, and between the 12th Battery as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Mrs. Hanib, wife of H. Hanib, one of the Radio members.

The better of the two games played was undoubtedly that between the Royal Corps of Signals and St. Andrew's which resulted in a draw of one goal each. The match, played on the Marina ground, was fast and evenly contested, both sides having a fair share of the exchange.

The Civilians opened the scoring in the first half and although the Signals tried hard to equalise before the interval they were unable to do so. They attacked strongly in the opening exchanges of the second half, and despite hard work by the Saints defence scored the equaliser. Both sides strove hard to get the League points but the score remained unchanged at the final whistle.

100% MAINTAINED. The Incognitos were far superior to the Kowloon Indians when the teams played for Mamak points on the Marina ground yesterday and gained a 4-1 victory. The Incognitos' forwards combined more effectively and their halves were a constant source of danger both in attack and defence. As usual the Red brothers were outstanding. W. Hoed, in the intermediate line, spilling many movements by the opposing forwards. He also shone in attack and fed his forwards well and with good judgment.

The Indians left much to be desired and played a very disjointed game.

Pinto was responsible for the opening goal in the first half, but shortly afterwards the scores were levelled up by the Indians. R. C. Reed put the Incogs' ahead before the interval and on resumption added another. The fourth was scored by Francis.

H.M.S. Tamar v. Police—King's Park, 4.15 p.m.
H.M.S. Tamar:—Jordan; Hill and Burkhitt; Foley, Downs, and Corbett; Martin, Jackson, Stone, Tetley and Toms.

St. Andrew's Scouts made their debut in hockey this season on Saturday when they defeated the Y.M.C.A. Ladies to the tune of 5 goals to 1 at King's Park. In their team was included five of the Mamak Tournament players and they did well to win. At the interval they had gained a lead of 3 goals to one. Bond, McEldan and Woolley netting for the Troup and Mrs. Read for the Ladies. In the second half the Scouts increased their lead with two further goals, scored by Woolley.

The R.A.S.C. defeated St. Andrew's Ladies by the only goal scored at King's Park on Saturday. King netting for the Corps.

A scrappy game between the Y.M.C.A. "A" and H.M.S. Kent at King's Park on Saturday resulted in a win for the sailors by 5 goals to two. At the interval the Kent led by 3-1.

FARCICAL DISPLAY IN FINAL PRACTICE MATCH

OVER-RUN BY CHINESE SIDE

(By "Veritas")

AFTER their debacle against the Combined Chinese eleven at Caroline Hill, when they were trounced by 4 goals to 2, the only consolation left to the Hongkong Interport football team is that Shanghai probably cannot turn out such a formidable side as the local representatives met on Saturday. But this, surely, is a disheartening attitude for one to have to adopt? If only the Interporters had displayed a glimmering of enterprise on the faintest suggestion of confidence!

As it was they were not only outclassed and completely defeated, but they played with their tails down the first fifteen minutes—an ominous sign.

Many people have been very wise after the event and since Saturday have stated that they quite expected to see the Interport team submerged by the Chinese; but Frankly, I was amazed. Although there were obvious weaknesses in the side—weaknesses which have been pointed out in these columns for the past few weeks—I had expected to see the forwards come up to the mark. When they failed it came as a natural order of things that the rest of the team collapsed.

One would like to find a ray of hope in the ability of the selected side, but on Saturday's display, one just can't, unless it be that they were not up to real form.

Just the same I feel that they played as well as the opposition would allow them, which means that the Interport team is decidedly weaker than one would at first imagine.

FORLORN HOPE.

It is too late to talk much about improvements. One can merely hope that by the time the team reaches Shanghai they will have remembered something of what they know about football. The whole eleven suffered from loss of memory on Saturday.

Although one is inclined to attach paramount blame to the half backs for the collapse of the team, I think this is, perhaps, hardly fair. The whole side had a bad day, and the cause of the disintegration of the Interporters as a united team was perhaps more psychological than anything else.

Rodgers, despite the fact that he was beaten four times, was comparatively speaking, blameless, and when he did handle the ball it was with his customary skill and confidence.

Lau Mau, however, who took Strange's place at left back was a big disappointment. His tackling was half hearted, his anticipations unintelligent, and his covering of Mullane elementary.

Mullane must be given credit for keeping cool under the most severe pressure, and although given double work through the inability of Bliss effectively to mark Shek Yan withstood the test as well as could be expected.

HALF BACK WEAKNESS AGAIN.

There was a general weakness about half back line, illuminated by reason of the extraordinary cleverness of the opposing forwards. Pardee hopelessly outplayed, never looked good enough to hold Tam Kong-pak, and the constructive side of his play suffered in due proportion.

Bliss gave one his most uninspiring display to date this season, and appeared to give up as unequal and hopeless, his contest with the Ip Fung-wa—Shek Yan wing. Andy Duncan was the most demonstrative of the Interport halves, but was scarcely more effective than his colleagues, being well beaten for speed by Tang Kwong-sun, who winged his way along the touchline as though he of course this collapse on the part of the defence had its reactions upon the forwards, but even so one expected a somewhat braver showing. When, however, the two men most likely to bring about a resuscitation—Sun and Wong—themselves broke down before the determined challenge of the Chinese, rearguard, there could be only one result—defeat.

HOWE'S LEADERSHIP.

Howe's leadership was no better and no worse than it has been throughout the trials, and he can put in the "ex-tenuating circumstances" plea that he was inadequately served by his colleagues. His chief error on Saturday was one of tactics; he would persist in trying to make individual bursts—through a cast-iron defence when a judicious pass to the waiting Wong Kam-shun might have had better results.

Neither of the inside forwards touched anything like their normal form. They were, of course, closely guarded, and the persistent "policing" of Leung In-chun, Ho Cho-yin and Wong Sui-wa appeared to rattle them into making as many false moves possible. In consequence both Baldry and Cheng Shui-going on the wings suffered, either from a surfeit of badly directed passes, or complete starvation.

Baldry never got across a dangerous centre, but Cheng willingly accepted the challenge of Tong Kwan, and not always came out second best. He was by far the most thrifty of the Interport forwards, but was given too few opportunities.

One of the most significant features of the Interporters' defeat was that it was sustained at the hands of a team which was composed of two Second Division players, Tang Kwong-sun at outside right and Shek Yan at outside left, Wong Shui-wah at centre-half who has not played for two years, and two backs, Leung In-chun and Ho Cho-yin, who both normally play half back. In addition the Combined Chinese were robbed of the services of Leung Chui-wing at right half.

TRUE TO THEIR NAME.

There is very little to be said about the combined Chinese, and it is adequately summed up in their title. They combined in such a remarkable manner that they literally made rings round the opposition. Tam Kong-pak was undoubtedly the outstanding player on the field. He led his forwards brilliantly and registered three magnificent goals, all the result of splendid opportunism. Others who took the eye were Leung and Ho at back, Lai Kwok-chiu at

LO COMBINATION WIN AGAIN

Easily Beat Capt. Barry and Mrs. Lochner

M.W. Lo and Miss Enid Lo regained the Mixed Doubles tennis championship laurels on Saturday, when, at the annual C.R.C. "At Home," they defeated Capt. Barry and Mrs. Lochner in the final 6-3, 6-1.

The winners were thoroughly deserving of this success, playing together with their old skill and understanding.

Mrs. Lochner put in some splendid work, but found her partner rather erratic.

Mrs. W. T. Southern presented the prizes, both for the Tennis League, in which the C.R.C. won all three shields, and the Club's own tournaments.

LESSON SERMON.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST.
SCIENTIST-HONGKONG

"Soul and body" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist yesterday.

The Golden Text was "I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope" (Ps. 130:5).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind. Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God." (Rom. 12: 1, 2, 13: 1).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Let us feel the divine energy of Spirit, bringing us into newness of life and recognizing no mortal nor material power as able to destroy. Let us rejoice that we are subject to the divine powers that be." Such is the true Science of being." (P. 249: 6-10).

BERLIN TOWN HALL

DEMAND BREAD

London, Nov. 20. According to a Berlin message, the Town Hall at Cassel was stormed by a number of Communists, men, women and children. The infants were placed in chairs while the women and children shouted in chorus "Hunger, Bread, Coal."

The officials promised extra rations, whereupon the demonstrators, apparently satisfied for the time being, marched off.—Our Own Correspondent.

Nanking, Nov. 20. The possibility of an early termination of the Szechuan warfare, through the defeat of Liu Wen-huei, Governor, is indicated in the news that Gen. Liu Hsiang has captured Luchow, at the confluence of the Taokiang and Yangtze.

Liu Wen-huei's troops are reported to be retreating in a south-westerly direction towards Szechow.—Reuter.

SOON TO BE OBTAINABLE
AT HONGKONG HOTEL

According to requests by many esteemed Chinese patrons it has been decided by the Management of the Hongkong & Shanghai Hotels, Ltd. to inaugurate as from December 1 a regular daily service of Chinese dishes and dinners, a la carte and table d'hôte, in the recently renovated Roof Garden of the Hongkong Hotel, which is now so popular amongst the Chinese clientele.

For this venture, expert Chinese cooks from first-rate local restaurants have been engaged, so that patrons can be assured of an excellent standard of cooking. In general the service is to be of regular Oriental style, and will conform to strict hygienic principles, whilst all manner of liquid refreshments will be available, including Chinese wines of highest grade. The Chinese superintendent of the Hongkong Hotel, Mr. Li Tai, thoroughly qualified and fully conversant with every phase of catering and management of Shanghai, Nov. 20. essentials in this regard, will be in control of the new restaurant. The Hongkong Hotel Roof Garden, now decorated in part Chinese style, is admirably adaptable to the purpose, maintaining, as it does, the reputation of being one of the most delightful rendezvous in the Colony. An innovation for Hongkong will be that a dance orchestra will be in attendance nightly during Chinese dinner; music will be provided by the talented Revellers band.

This departure should fill a long felt want not only on the part of the Hongkong Chinese younger set, but by foreign tourists and residents who desire a restaurant combining Eastern atmosphere and customs with all modern western facilities.

The new arrangements will in no way interfere with the tea dances now held daily at 5 p.m., which will continue to function as usual.

1931	$13,223,545.00

A lower rate of commission existed in 1931 due to cheap money for the greater part of the year. From September, money commenced to tighten up. As it is we earned 1.33% interest in excess of 8% paid on our Debentures, in addition to $146,825 commissions. From the above it will be seen that our 8% Debentures are secured by first mortgages on 56.4% of value and backed up with $5,000,000 capital.

CHINA

The following extracts are taken from the Chairman's statement at the last annual Shareholders' Meeting, February 29th, 1932.

"We feel that the Debenture holder from an investment standpoint, is just as much an interested partner of the Company as the Common Shareholder and is entitled to his just return on his investment, and by the figures given on the two years' working, I think we have amply proven that we were right that our Debenture holders receive eight per cent. interest instead of six per cent."

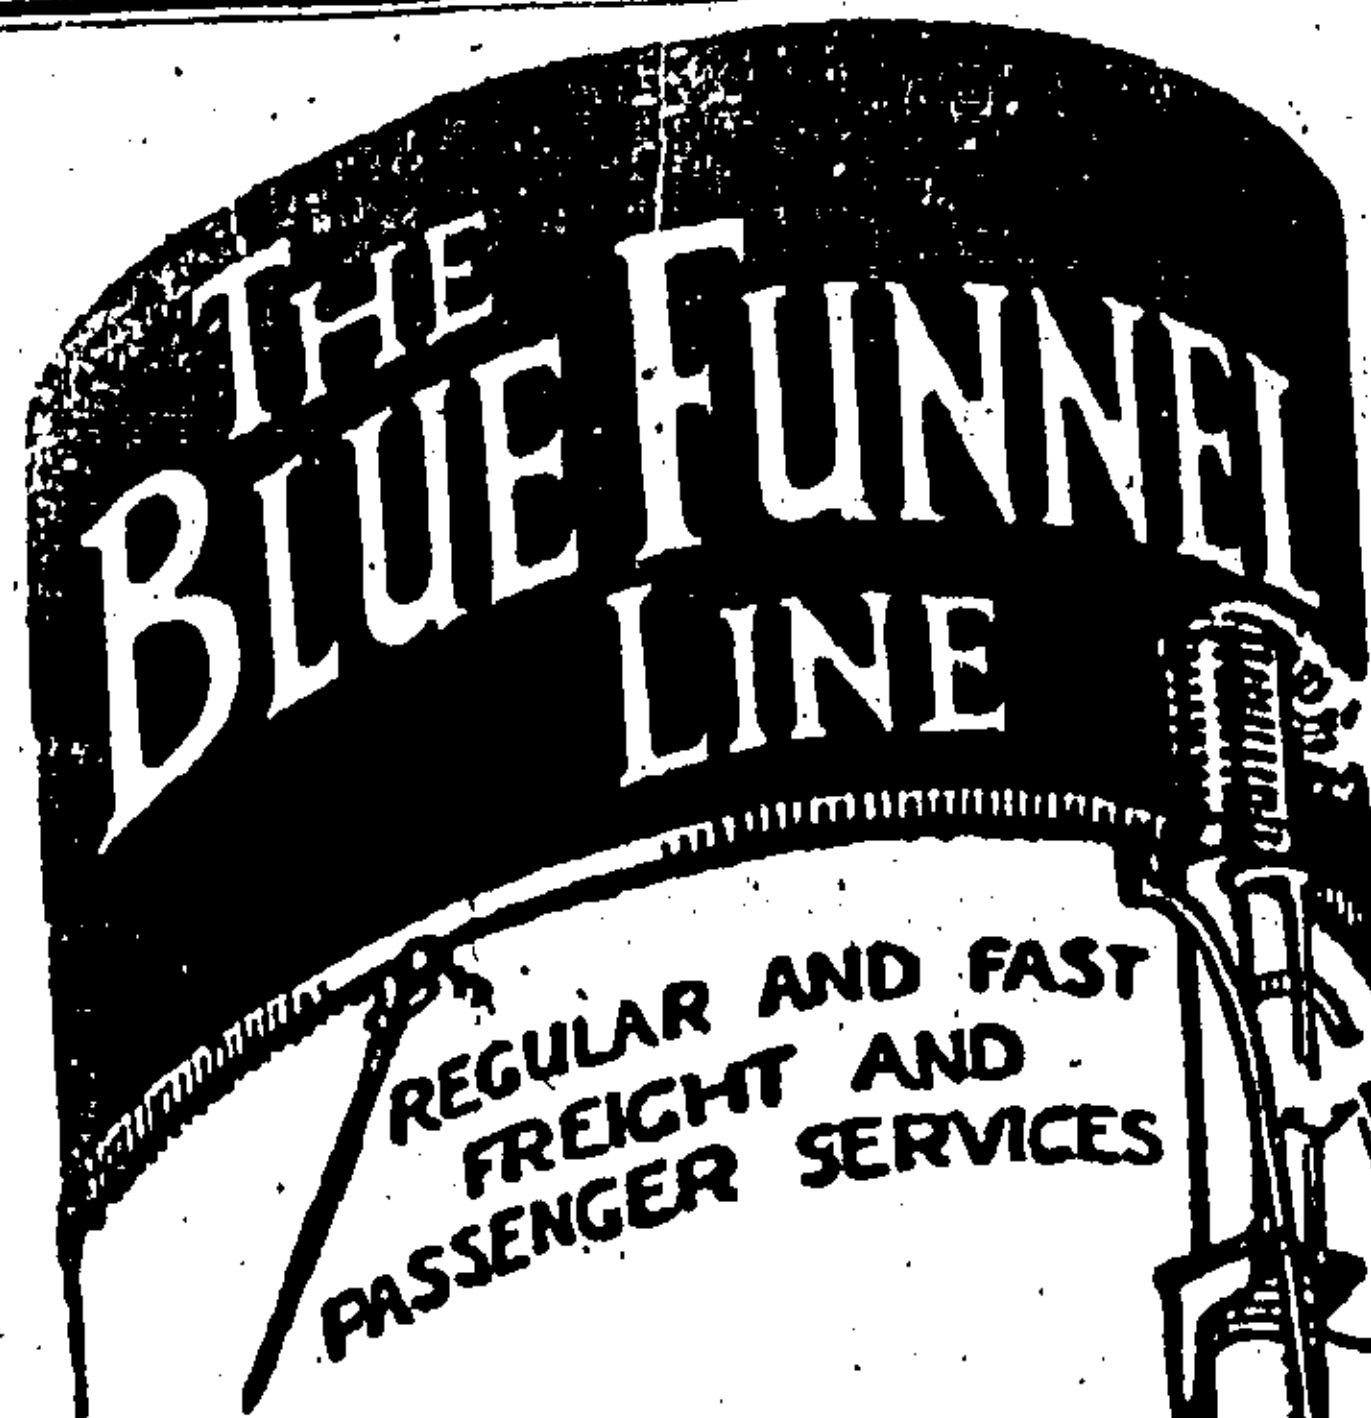

"The most successful concerns of the future will be those who recognize this principle—that even banks will allocate to depositors a part of profits earned on their money over and above current rates of interest. As our balance sheets show quite plainly, the proceeds from the sale of our debentures is not used for the purchase of Real Estate, as we are not speculators, but for investment in first class mortgages, amply secured not only by the value of the property pledged as security, but as a further security, the debentures constitute a first claim on the total assets of the Company. An analysis to the figures involved shows that every debenture has behind it assets equal to three times its value."

"If after careful consideration of actual facts and figures you are receiving less than 8 per cent. upon your investment and/or savings, you are not using judgment but following old customs, believing 5 per cent. and 6 per cent. are current rates."

RECENT MURDERS

REWARDS OFFERED BY POLICE

Rewards leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons concerned in two recent murders have been notified by Police Headquarters.

A sum of $500 is offered for information which will result in the arrest and conviction of any person or persons for the murder of a sampan woman who together with her daughter were done to death and their bodies thrown overboard on November 3 last. Two men are known to have hired the woman's boat which was subsequently found abandoned.

For the necessary information concerning the murder of a Chinese on the hillside at Shatin a sum of $250 is being offered. It will be remembered that on September 7 last the body of the deceased man was found in a grave and, on being exhumed, marks of violence were found, suggesting that the man had been murdered.

ECONOMY DRIVE IN CANTON

Regulations for Officials

PRIVATE LIFE NOT IMMUNE

For the purpose of encouraging thrift, the South-west Committee of the Kuomintang has issued a circular order requiring all government servants to limit their expenses for entertainment and in ceremonial affairs.

The circular order which is applicable to all public servants in Canton and Kwangtung province requires that they should use inexpensive native materials for their dress.

If a dinner is given in the city, it says, the cost shall not exceed $20; and dinners held in rural districts shall not entail a cost of more than $10.

Other provisions are as follows:—Expenses for marriage ceremonies should be curtailed as much as possible. While a band may accompany the wedding procession, ceremonial paraphernalia (Yi Chang) is not allowed to be carried along the streets. To welcome guests to a wedding, only tea is necessary, that is to say expensive banquets are to be dispensed with.

FUNERAL RITES.

Funeral rites should be made as simple as possible, and all spectacular displays are to be avoided, such as the burning of paper houses, furniture, joss papers dedicated to the dead, etc. Prayers offered to the departed spirit are to be given only in a monastery. All memorial scrolls should be made of native cloth.

In birthday parties, guests should be served only with noodles or spaghetti (which indicate long life), and no other edibles are necessary. There should be no entertaining on occasions such as house-warming, the first month after the birth of children or their following birthdays.

Gifts to friends and relatives on happy events should not cost more than $2, but contributions to a bereaved family are not restricted to any definite sum.—Central Press.

LILIUS TRIAL BEGINS

PROSECUTION GIVES EVIDENCE

Manila, Nov. 19. The trial of Alejo E. Lilius, correspondent of various magazines, for alleged swindle against R. L. Hobbs, of the Luneta Hotel, began yesterday in the court of Judge Pedro Concepcion. Lilius is charged with having allegedly passed bad cheques to Hobbs in payment of obligations.

In the trial yesterday, however, it developed that Lilius had previously made payments on these hotel obligations and that he had made assignments in favour of Hobbs to cover up the amounts of the cheques. Hobbs occupied the witness stand as first witness to the prosecution and remained there all day. The trial is to be continued next Wednesday November 23.

Hobbs testified in direct examination about his receipt of the cheques from Lilius against the Jolo branch of the Philippine National Bank and the return to him of the cheques because Lilius did not have sufficient funds. He brought with him hotel records to aid him in his testimony.

Hobbs admitted that two cheques were given him by Lilius in payment for the three bad cheques previously given him. These cheques, however, he kept in his safe and did not send to the bank because he knew Lilius had no funds in the bank.

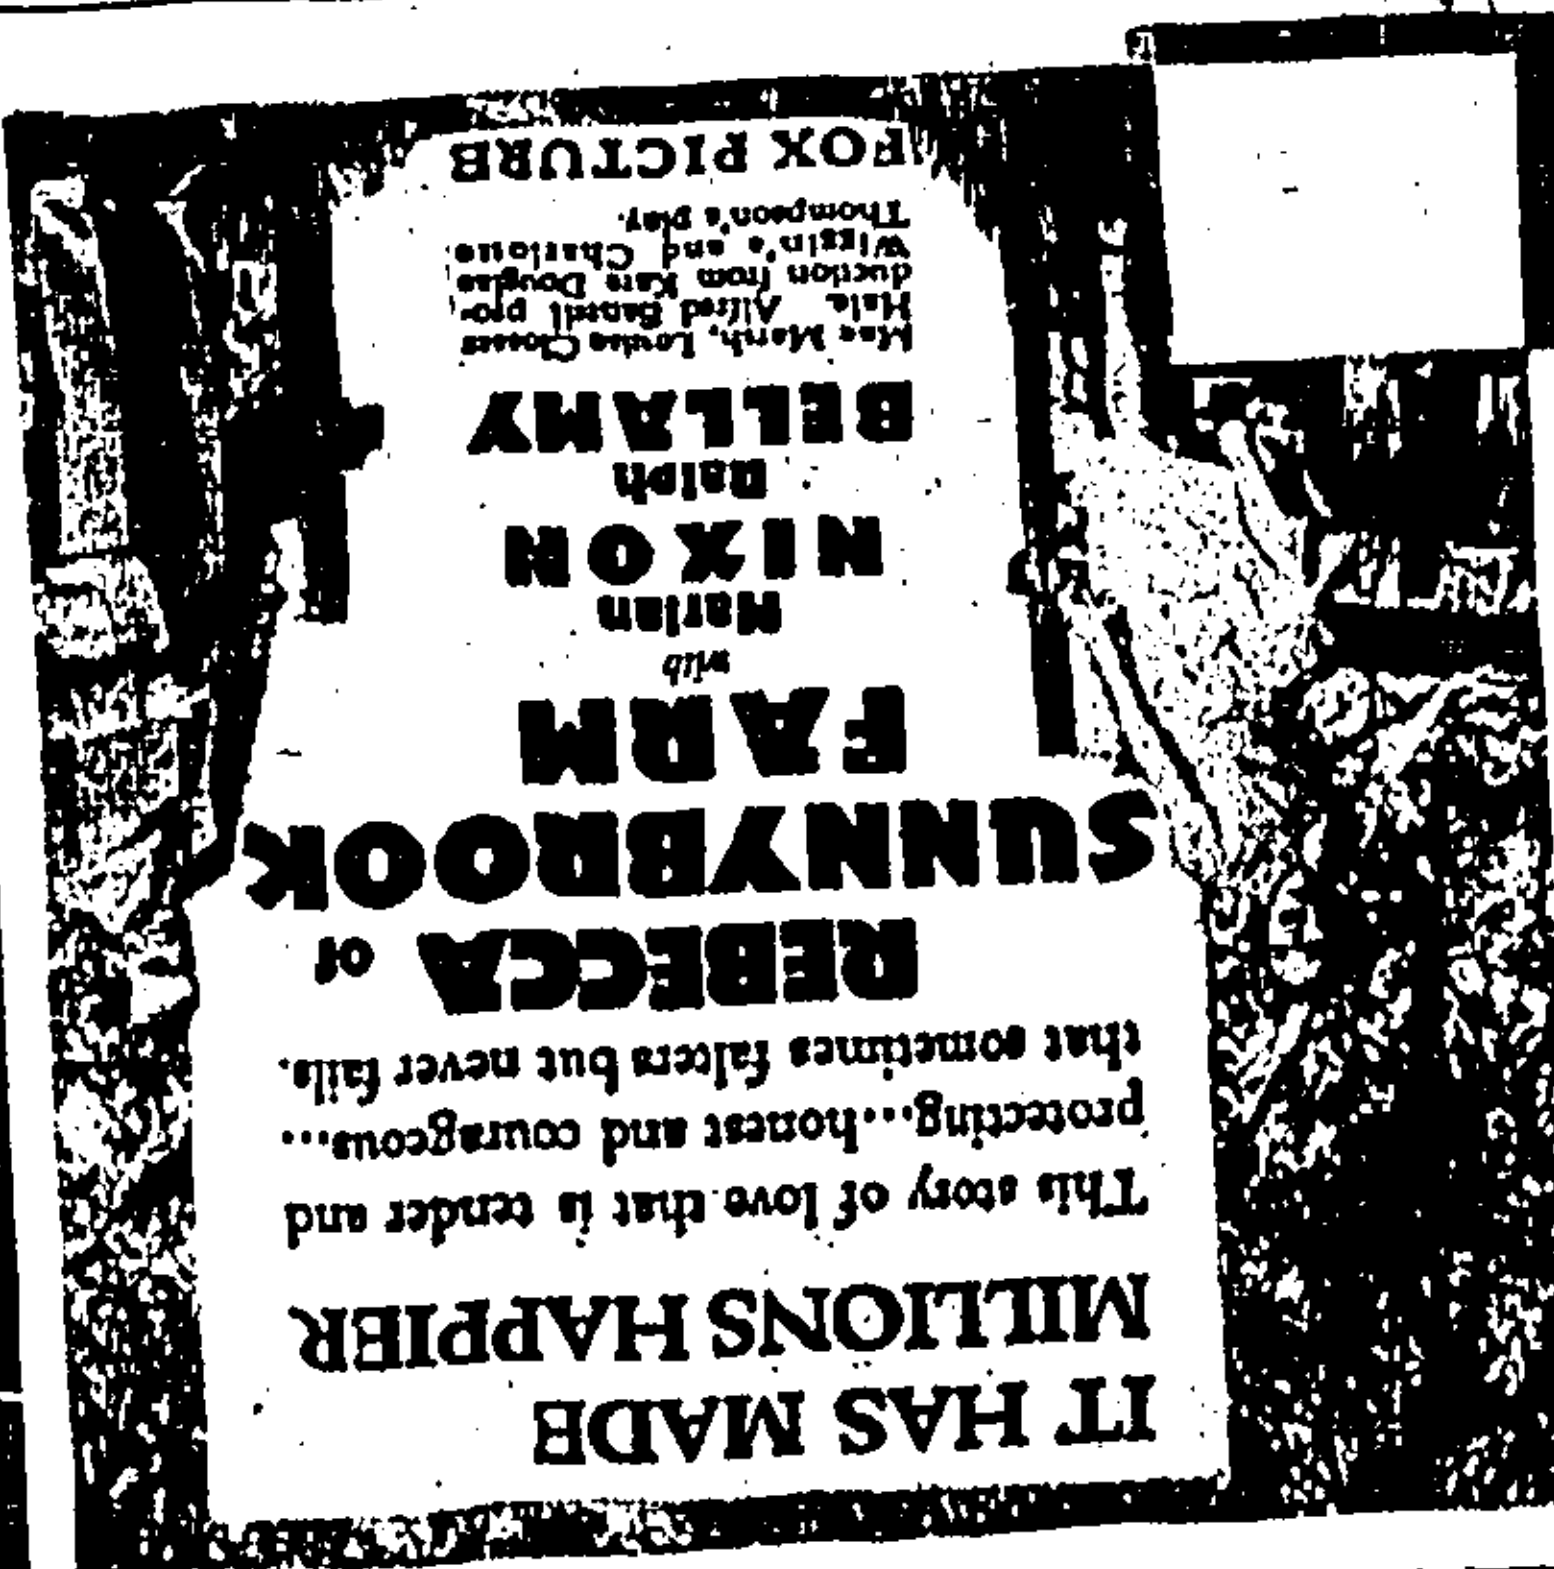

On account of the seeming reluctance of Hobbs to reply to cross-examination questions, Mr. Wolfson, attorney for the defence, told him: "You speak the truth or I'll get mad." Hobbs replied: "Go ahead and bust yourself."

The current attraction at the King's Theatre is "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm". People who saw it yesterday were unanimous in their verdict that the picture is exceptionally good for a story which is familiar but which has lost nothing from original treatment. Judicious cutting and splendid acting. Mary Nixon, in the title role, has established a strong local following for her charming portrayal in this production, and Louise Clozier Hale, in the role of one of the spinster aunts, leaves us on tip-toes waiting for her next picture. Decidedly good, and should be seen by all. Accompanying the feature film is a 10-minute reel showing the 1932 Olympic Games at the Los Angeles Stadium.

M.C.C. COLLAPSE

AUSTRALIA FIND A BOWLER

NAGEL, 6 FOR 21

A MORNING OF SENSATION

Melbourne, Nov. 21.
Nagel, the comparatively little known fast-medium bowler, who was brought into the Australian eleven at the last moment, brought off a sensational brilliant feat this morning, sending back six of the M.C.C. batsmen at a cost of 21 runs.

There was nothing to fore-shadow the remarkable M.C.C. collapse. The Australians did not last long on resuming with 216 on the board and one wicket to fall. In fact, they were all out after two runs had been added.

The wicket, however, was soon playing traditional pre-lunch tricks. The M.C.C. appeared to be in a fairly strong position with a lead of 64 runs on a somewhat difficult wicket, but within half-an-hour, they had their backs to the wall in real earnest.

REGULAR PROCESSION.

The tall Victorian bowler found a spot and quickly had the Englishmen in difficulties, a regular procession developing to and from the pavilion. R.E.S. Wyatt was the first to go, then Leyland, then Sutcliffe, and after those, G.O. Allen, Paynter and Larwood.

Nagel took all the six M.C.C. wickets that fell before lunch for a meagre 44 runs. Paynter was top scorer with 12, Sutcliffe made 10, Leyland and Allen 6 each, Wyatt 3 and Larwood nil.

TABLES TURNED.

The weather was fine and 3,000 people witnessed the manner in which Australia and Nagel turned the tables to provide them with their first cause for encouragement since the M.C.C. tourists landed.

With four wickets to fall, the M.C.C. are now 108 runs on. Lunch scores:

M.C.C.—1st Innings: 282 (Wyatt 29, Sutcliffe 87, Leyland 38, Allen 48, Oxenham 5 for 53, Nash 3 for 39).
Combined Australian XI:—218 (O'Brien 46, Bradman 36, Larwood 4 for 54; Bower 3 for 63, Voce 2 for 55).

M.C.C.—2nd Innings: 44 for 6 wickets (Nagel 6 for 21).

THIS WORLD OF CHAOS

DESTRUCTION PLAN FOR RUBBER

London, Nov. 21.

A scheme aiming at the rehabilitation of rubber has been evolved by Mr. J. A. Hyner, chief plantation manager of the Hessa Rubber Company of Amsterdam, one of the leading companies operating in Sumatra, according to the Financial Times.

The plan provides for the destruction of surplus rubber trees, for which compensation would be paid and supervision to ensure that there should be no fresh planting.

The plan also envisages the conversion of other parts of estates for other products.

It is suggested that the government guarantee the interest and the sinking fund on the finance needed for the scheme. The necessary funds should be raised by levying an export tax on rubber.

The weddings will shortly take place between Mr. Karl K. Wack, merchant, of Shanghai, and Miss Mota Burkhardt, an heiress from Europe; and of Mr. Leung Ng-chor, cashier of the Peninsula Hotel, and Miss Anne Parkinson, 237, Nathan Road, Kowloon.

G.B.S. DENIES FLIGHT STORY

BUT MAY MAKE USE OF THE IDEA

London, Nov. 21.
The report that Mr. Bernard Shaw intends to fly over the Great Wall of China is decidedly premature.

The famous playwright himself, in an interview with Reuter, characterized the report as "pure invention," though he said that if any airman in the Far East offered him a lift, he might participate in the flight suggested.

Mr. Bernard Shaw, accompanied by his wife, will be one of a large number of prominent people who are making a tour of the world in the Empress of Britain, which sails from England next month. Mr. Noel Coward and the Earl of Cadogan will also be on board.

Capetown, Nov. 20.
Mrs. Mollison (Amy Johnson) has telegraphed to the Governor-General, the Earl of Clarendon, expressing her deepest thanks for the King's message of congratulation, which, she says, will be one of her most treasured possessions.

The famous aviatrix declares that if the weather reports are favourable and engineers are satisfied with her machine, she will certainly make an attempt on the record for a flight from Capetown to London.

If the reports are not satisfactory, she will sail for England on November 25.—Reuter.

Harbin, Nov. 21.
Three mixed passenger and goods trains travelling on the western section of the C.E.R. yesterday were heavily fired upon at Kaolintze by bandits. The drivers speeded up and reached safety without casualties. Mr. Rudy, manager of the C.E.R., considers that the Shih-ta-ho-tze-feng-tao-tze section of the line is dangerous for the lives of passengers and for goods consequently has closed it down until it is adequately guarded.—Reuter.

THE INSULL CASE

LAWYERS REACH ATHENS

EXTRADITION TO BE FOUGHT

(Our Own Correspondent).

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Agency, Constantinople, 1932. Reprinted, Nov. 21, 9.17 a.m.)

London, Nov. 21.
Two American lawyers, Mr. Vlachos, Assistant Attorney, and Mr. Charles Bellows, who are charged to present the case for the extradition by the Greek Government of Mr. Samuel Insull, arrived at Athens to-day.

Before opening the case, they will examine all the documents connected with the case and the demand for extradition, which is based upon Mr. Insull's being wanted in Chicago to answer charges of embezzlement and larceny.

NO POLITICAL MOTIVES.

Mr. Vlachos, who is of Greek origin and speaks Greek, denied that there were any political motives in the prosecution of Samuel Insull as was alleged by Insull's counsel when he appeared against his client's arrest. It is understood that the fallen Chicago utilities magnate intends to resist extradition to the last ditch.

DISPUTE MOVING TO CRISIS

PESSIMISM PREVAILING AT GENEVA

TO-DAY'S CRITICAL DISCUSSION

GENEVA, NOV. 21.

THE SINO-JAPANESE DISPUTE OVER MANCHURIA IS VERY RAPIDLY MOVING TOWARDS A CRISIS.

It is feared that a real clash will come this morning when, at eleven o'clock, the League Council will begin its debate on the Lytton Report.

Mr. Matsuoka will introduce the subject by explaining the Japanese position and Dr. Wellington Koo, who was China's observer on the Lytton Commission, will reply.

The observations of both parties will probably be referred to the Lytton Commission for comment, but the subsequent course of events is most uncertain.

An air of pessimism prevails in Geneva, however, in view of the Japanese rejection of the Lytton Report and Dr. W. W. Yen's fighting speech in which he hinted that China would invoke Article XVI, providing for sanctions, which would seem practically to rule out the possibility of conciliatory action by the Council under Article XI of the Covenant. The Council therefore will have no alternative but to refer the Report to the Assembly Commission of Nineteen, which has always shown more vigour in insisting on the letter of the Covenant than can be claimed for the Council.

JAPAN'S OBSERVATIONS ON REPORT

The Japanese find themselves unable to accept the conclusions of the Lytton Commission on any vital point touched upon in the Report submitted to the League, hence the anxiety regarding the outcome of to-day's meeting.

In their observations on the Report, the Japanese Government assert that the Manchurians rejected the Chang Haueh-liang tyranny and that the self-determination movement was a spontaneous public act. It is also claimed that Japan's recognition of "Manchukuo" does not constitute a violation of international engagements.

The Lytton Finding. It is a fact that, without declaration of war, a large area of what was indisputably Chinese territory has been forcibly seized and has, in consequence of this operation, been separated from and declared independent.

The steps by which this was accomplished are claimed by Japan to have been consistent with the obligations of the League of Nations, the Kellogg Pact, and the Nine Power Treaty of Washington, all of which were designed to prevent action of the kind. Moreover, the operations, which had only just begun when the matter was first brought to the attention of the League, were completed during the following month, and are held by the Japanese Government to be consistent with the assurance given by its representatives at Geneva on September 29 and December 10. The justification in this case has been that all the military operations have been legitimate acts of self-defence, the right of the League to intervene being thereby excluded.

It is pointed out that the League of Nations, the Kellogg Pact, and the Nine Power Treaty of Washington, all of which were designed to prevent action of the kind. The justification in this case has been that all the military operations have been legitimate acts of self-defence, the right of the League to intervene being thereby excluded.

THE FUTURE.

The Japanese Government, contrary to the Lytton Commission's conclusions, considers that general recognition of and cooperation in the development of the present regime is

"DEFIANCE OF LEAGUE"

"RULE OF LAW OR FORCE?"

"JAPAN RIGHT"

LEAGUE PRESTIGE AT STAKE

London, Nov. 21.

Japan's rejection of the Lytton Report is the subject of striking leading articles in London's newspapers this morning, revealing a marked conflict of opinion.

The Conservative journals throw their weight on the side of Japan and attempt to marshal public opinion against any action likely to offend Japan.

The Liberal and Labour organs are equally bitter in their opposition to the Japanese viewpoint.

TORY REQUIREMENTS.

The Morning Post says that an impartial reading of the Japanese reply to the Lytton Report makes it evident that Japan is legally and morally on a stronger ground than most of her critics.

If the League fails to find a solution, the journal adds, it has to reckon the damage both to its prestige and to the prospects of Disarmament Conference success. The solution sought must, it says, reconcile the government in Manchuria with the re-establishment of amicable relations between China and Japan. It is not fanciful to suggest that the Manchukuo regime is capable of modification so as to satisfy both these indispensable requirements.

DELIBERATE CONTEMPT.

The Daily Herald, on the other hand, says that the Japanese observations constitute defiance of the League Council. The Commission appointed by the League Council is treated as a hostile body, its competence is questioned and its findings are derided categorically.

The Labour organ adds that Japan denies the right of the Council or the Assembly to discuss her actions. The issue is now widened beyond that of the Sino-Japanese dispute. The future of the League and the whole machinery for world peace are at stake, a fact which Tokyo regards with deliberate contempt.

DAILY MAIL OUTPOURING.

The Daily Mail goes farthest in extremity. It declares that the Japanese reply to the Lytton Commission will convince all reasonable people that Japan has right on her side.

Misguided idealists, it declares, have taken sides with Chinese war lords and communists, and mean to make strenuous efforts to force Britain into a wild scheme for an economic and financial boycott of Japan.

The bellicose pacifists of Geneva should be made to understand that in no circumstances are the British people going to be dragged into a conflict with Japan. They regard their former faithful ally as a present friend and sooner than be involved in hostilities with her, they will quit the League of Nations.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN EXPECTED.

The News-Chronicle (Liberal) adopts the line that the Japanese observations are just what might have been expected. They constitute a flat refusal to accept the Lytton Report or any other findings but those that she has herself enforced at the sword's point.

There is nothing new in the arguments advanced in favour of her proceedings in Manchuria. The arguments are far older than modern Japan. It is not necessary to assume that it is Japan's last word, but as Japan's first Shanghai, Nov. 21.

Marquis Li Kuo-chieh, who has provoked the grave displeasure of the Government for his connexion with the China Realty Company's loan to the C.M.S.N. Company, may go to Nanking when Mr. Chen Fu-mu returns to the capital from Hongkong, according to this morning's China Press.

Marquis Li is still in custody, though it is understood that, in all probability, he will be released to-day.

He is very ill and Mrs. Li says that her husband needs better medical attention than he can expect to receive from the courts. She further expressed the hope that her husband's trial will be postponed until he has sufficiently recovered from his present illness.

Mr. Chen Fu-mu is already on his way to Nanking, where he holds the post of Vice-Minister of Communications. It is claimed that Mr. Chen Fu-mu himself took an important part in the negotiations between the China Realty Company and the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company.—Reuter.

word it leaves nothing to the imagination.

LAW OR FORCE?

"This may be the League's last chance," writes Mr. A. J. Cummings, in the News Chronicle, referring to to-day's Council meeting.

"The last thing that Japan desires is to withdraw from the League of Nations. The Japanese delegates will do their utmost to induce the League to permit the Manchukuo experiment to succeed. They will probably outline a liberal and tolerant regime as a plausible alternative to the Lytton Report."

"Will the League resist these blandishments and stand fast? A prolonged trial opens to-day to decide the supreme issue as to whether in the modern world the rule of law or the rule of force shall prevail."—Reuter.

CALL of the WEST

BY R. G. MONTGOMERY

CHAPTER XXVII

Amper Delo waited impatiently for Donna to return with news from the posse. He was impatient because he feared that, even though the bandit was surrounded, he might escape. When she did not come Amper tried to stand up and found that he was much more able to walk than he had thought.

About 4 o'clock Dudley came riding across the clearing. He looked as fresh as though he had just stepped out of a barber shop. Asper glared angrily at him as he swung down from his horse.

"What's doing up there? Where is Donna?" Asper spat out the questions. It was relief to take his impatience out on someone.

"The men are milling around but they haven't captured or killed anyone yet." Dudley flicked a spot of dust from his trousers. "I haven't seen Donna. I should think she'd stay in camp! This is a man's business."

Asper exploded with a roar. "You take it pretty smooth, don't you? You don't seem much worried about her! You'd better be looking around and showing some life!"

Dudley backed down two steps before this broadside. "Why, she can't be in danger!" he argued.

"Not in danger? You complacent fool! She may be in worse danger than that from a bullet!" Asper got up from his chair and reached for a heavy cane that had been placed near him to use in pulling articles within his reach.

"Easy, sir! You'll do yourself a lot of harm!" Dudley advanced to the top step again and lifted a warning hand.

Asper smashed the heavy end of the cane down on the porch floor and bellowed. "Get out of here! Go find your wife!"

Dudley backed down to the bottom step. He would as soon have put a foot on the porch with an angry lion waiting for him as to step within reach of Asper's cane. "I tell you there is danger!" Asper sank back into the chair and mopped his forehead with a red silk handkerchief.

"I'll ride right out and fetch her in," Dudley promised. He was about to reach for his saddle horn when Swergin came thundering around the corner of the building.

The timber boss was dusty and his face was streaked with perspiration. He leaped from his horse and lumbered up the steps. Something in his manner made Dudley and old Asper both come to attention.

"What's the matter now?" Asper grunted, half afraid to ask.

"What's up?" Dudley cut in. "Your wife's horse, the roan, came in with an empty saddle about an hour ago," Swergin grunted.

"And Ball?" Asper was on his feet, the heavy cane forgotten.

"He got away clean. Sneaked through the lines," Swergin mopped his forehead with a grimy hand.

Asper remained speechless for a full minute. Dudley pulled at the handle of his quirt and stared at Swergin.

"What in Sam Hill did you let her ride out for?" Swergin almost shouted. "Didn't I give orders?" He halted before the look in Asper Delo's eyes.

"I'm taking charge of this right now! Get me 10 good men," Asper rumbled. The rage had left his voice and it was hard and cold now.

Swergin opened his mouth but it was Dudley who spoke. "You can't do that, sir. You're not able."

"Not able?" Asper's eyes measured Dudley Winters. "I'm more able than you fools!" He took a step toward Dudley. "Get out of my sight. Look at you—as sick as a button after being out chasing a killer like Ball all afternoon!" He advanced toward the steps. "Get me those men and come along yourself," he snapped at Swergin.

The timber boss retreated down the steps and headed for the corral. Dudley mounted his horse without a word and trotted the animal down toward the corral.

Wrathfully Asper watched him go. "A fine son-in-law you turned out to be!" he muttered. "Riding down to the barn when you ought to be raring into the hills this minute." He sat down on the top step to wait the coming of the men.

Swergin got a crew together in a short time. Asper checked the men over as they lined up at the foot of the steps. Dudley was not with them, but he had expected that.

"Ball has made off with my daughter. I'll give $1,000 cash for her safe return and another $1,000 for the body of that dirty coyote—dead." His eyes travelled coldly over the men.

Swergin slid from his horse. "You'd better stay in camp," he said gruffly.

"Get me a horse! I'm taking charge and I'm going along. You'll take orders from me!"

Swergin turned about abruptly. "Get the boss an easy horse," he growled.

Asper found that he had trouble in mounting the horse that was brought for him but he gritted his teeth and climbed into the saddle. He was about to ride out at the head of his men when the camp doctor came running across the street.

"You must let me bandage that shoulder if you're going to act like a fool," the doctor snapped.

Asper looked the medical man over with a baleful glare. He seemed on the point of sinking his spurs and riding over the slender medic. As last he slid from the saddle and growled deeply, "Get it done in a hurry!"

The doctor bandaged the arm and shoulder tightly. He said nothing but it was plain that he thought his boss the most irresponsible lunatic he had ever attended.

Asper pulled his wool shirt back over the bandages and mounted without asking for any advice from the doctor. He faced the men and gave a short order.

"Ride after me!" With those words he struck out at a gallop in the direction of Pass Creek. Swergin rode at his side in grim silence. He had been in the saddle the better part of the day but he was still untired and he looked as grim as Asper himself. They rode deep into the timber in a zig-zag course. It was Asper's plan to pick up Ball's trail and to track him to his hiding place. He forged ahead at a killing pace, the steep slope cutting the wind of his horse and dropping out two of the less powerful saddlers. The others were streaked with lather when he finally called a halt. Not a sign of a fresh track had they crossed though they had ranged from the lowest ravine to the rim of Folly Mountain.

Swergin sat on his horse with a grim smile on his lips. "You ought to be satisfied now that you can't pick up that bird's trail. You just have to waylay him."

"We have to locate his hiding place," Asper's voice was weak from the strain of riding.

"You'll never do it this way," Swergin was squinting into the sunset as though figuring the hours of light they had left.

"How will we do it then?" Asper was desperate.

"Let the men spread out and each go after that $1,000 by himself. You ride back to camp and take a rest for an hour," Swergin slapped the neck of his trembling horse. "There ain't no animal living can stand climbing on a run. You'll just kill all of our best horses."

Asper knew the timber boss was right. He nodded his head, admitting defeat, and turned his horse down the slope. "Go after him and get him! My offer still stands."

The men spread out and each took a different direction. Asper did not look at Swergin. He rode away with a dejected droop to his shoulders. This was the breaking straw. Ball had taken toll that was beyond his powers to meet. He would gladly have surrendered on any terms the cowboy offered had Ball been able to talk to him at that moment.

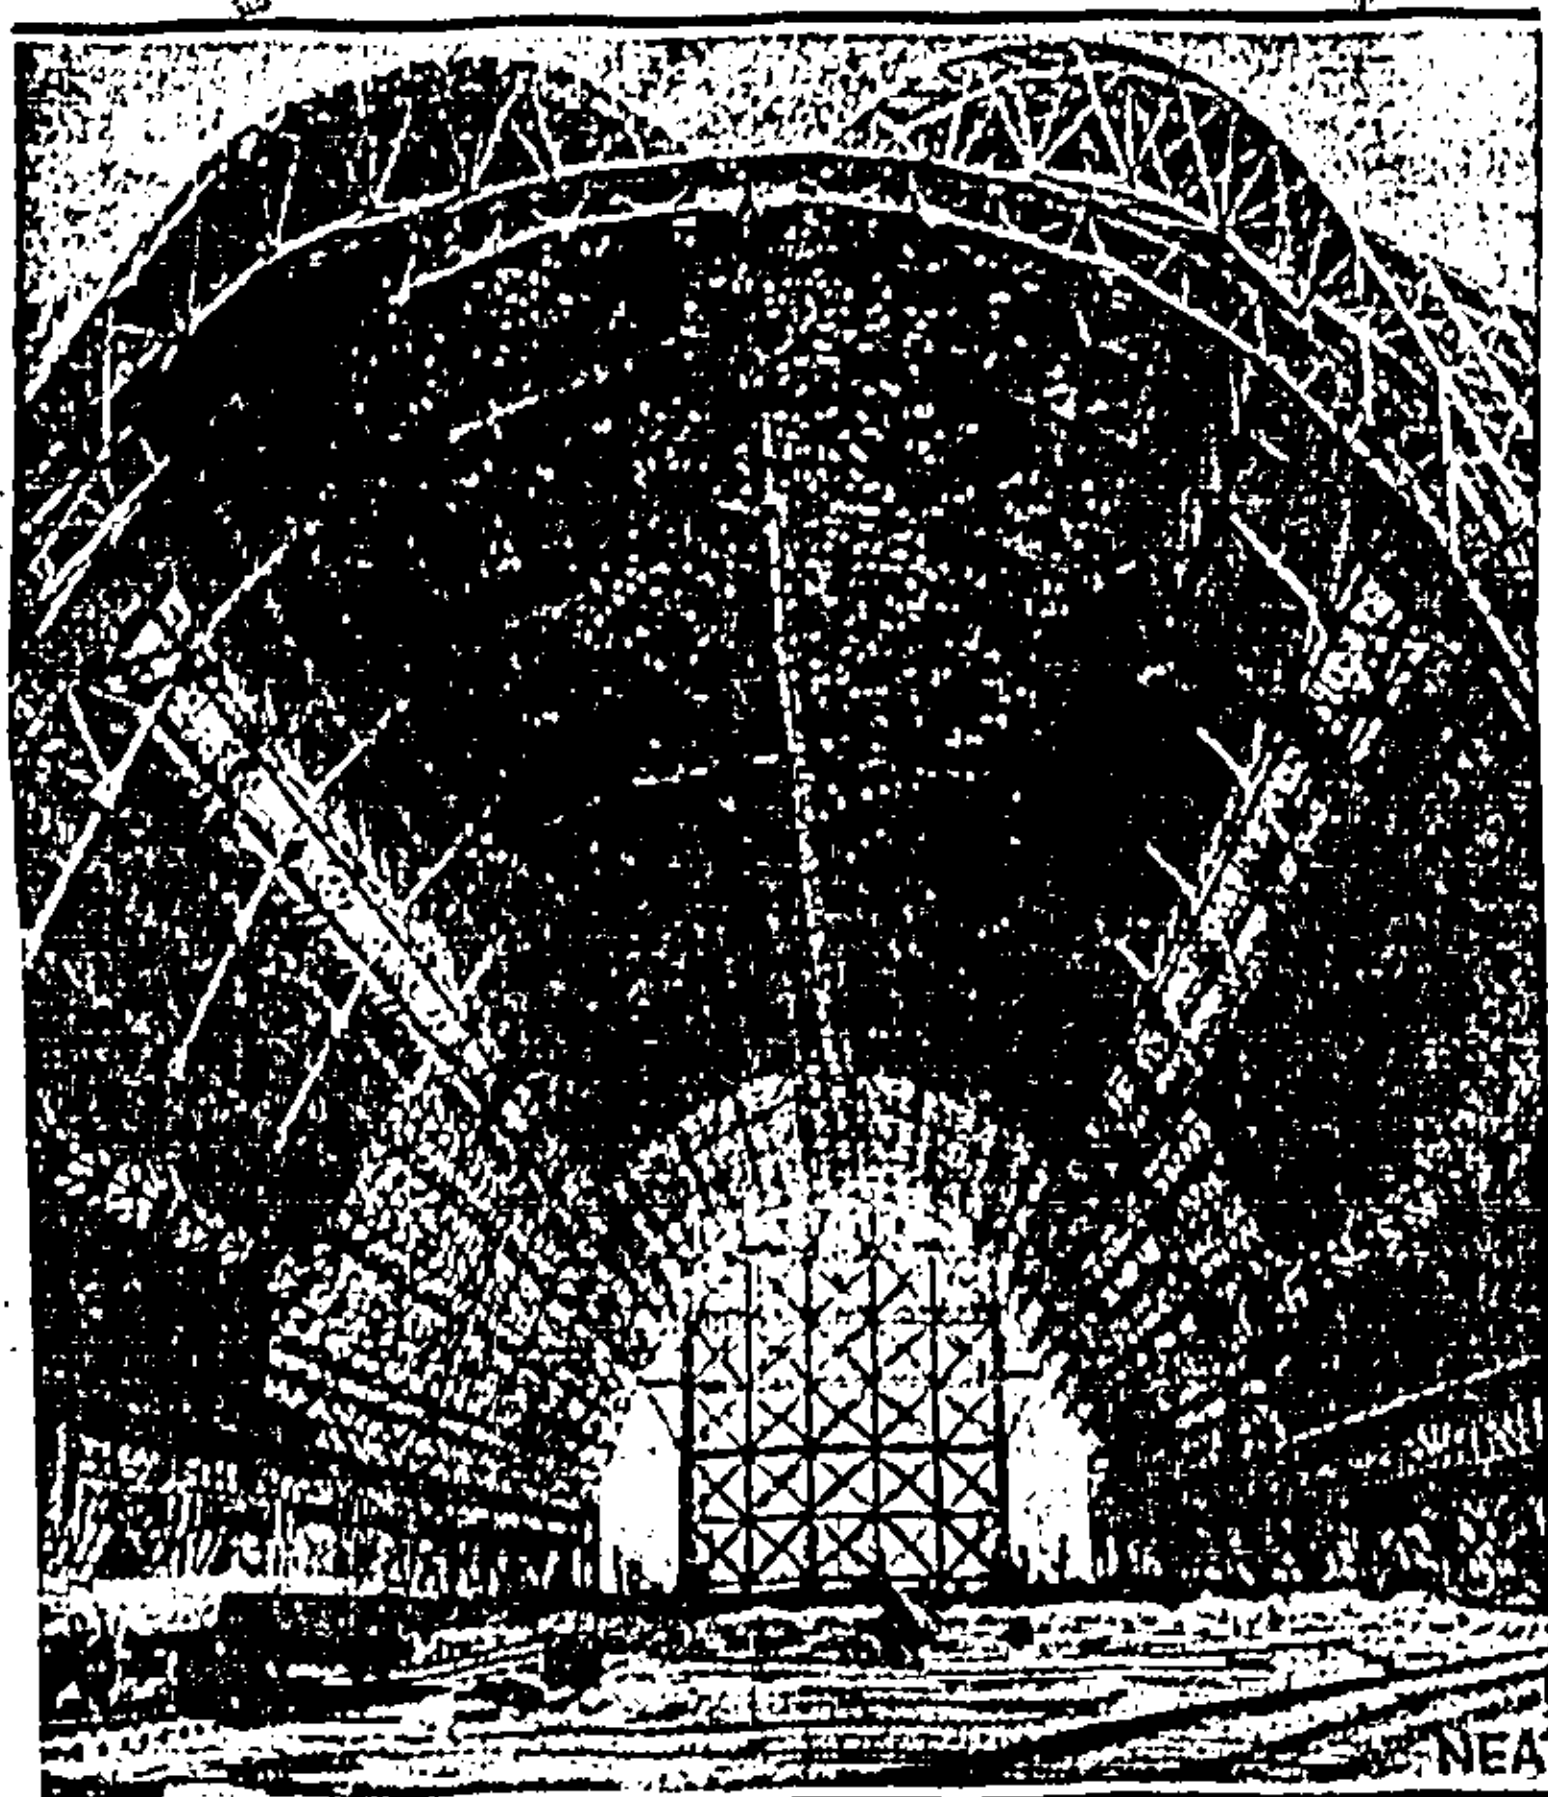

Swergin doubled back down the trail. He rode slowly and in a manner that showed he knew where he was going. He kept along the rim in a downward direction. After riding for perhaps a mile he dismounted and examined the ground in a dense growth of aspens. With a grunt he straightened up and squinted at the sun. He had found the tracks he sought but the light was falling fast. He would have to take up the trail in the morning. It would still lead where he wanted to go.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

The charm of Marian Nixon is the impression carried away after witnessing the Fox version of the famous Kate Douglas Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson masterpiece, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" at the King's Theatre to-day. As enacted by her, Rebecca is an imaginative girl whose penchant for adopting everyone's opinions, remembered trait of the heroine in the original book, is again made the motivating influence in the plot. In wealth of production detail, this version of "Rebecca" reflects throughout the sensitive guiding hand of Alfred Santell, the director. He has closely adhered to the theme of the book in his screen treatment of the story, the scenario of which was prepared by S. N. Behrman and Sonya Levien. Additional members of the supporting cast include Alphonse Henry, Claire McDowell, Ronald Harwood and Willis Marks, all of whom contribute outstanding performances. In emotional appeal, in grandeur of presentation of production, this latest ranked as the finest ever given the inspiring, stirring romance of the little girl who thought the whole world was "just wonderful!"

Dix Creates Remarkable Role.
New York's shadowy, mysterious East Side at the time the notorious Car Barn Gang ruled both the upper and underworld of Manhattan, is graphically brought to the screen in Radio Pictures' "Young Donovan's Kid" opening on Wednesday at the Queen's Theatre. Roofs have been jerked from the crowded filthy tenements, pool halls, pastime clubs and gang rendezvous, to enable the prying eyes of the camera to enter and the microphone to hear. Eddie Cragg, cameraman, spent nearly two weeks filming exteriors of the old familiar spots, and Radio Pictures constructed thirty interior and seven exterior sets, hospitals, police headquarters, pool rooms, music halls, flats, court rooms, bank, falls. The houses of correction to further the realistic transmission of the Rex Beach story, "Big Brother," to the screen. In this setting stories ever conceived by authors—the tale of a Robin Hood gang leader who takes and kias at the same time, who loved as deeply as he could hate, the most hated and most loved man in New York's underworld. Interpreting this role is Richard Dix, the star who contributed one of the most remarkable characterizations of the year—that of Vanece Cravat in "Cimarron." In "Young Donovan's Kid," he is said to reach new and greater heights. Jackie Cooper, brilliant little star of "Skippy," and Marion Shilling are among the members of the supporting cast.

FANLING GOLF

THREE TIE IN THE BOGEY POOL

There were sixteen entries for the Bogey Pool on the new course at Fanling over the week-end. The result was a tie between J. B. Lozon (7), N. J. Perrin (18) and E. M. Potley (8), all of whom finished all square. The tie was decided by lot, and N. J. Perrin won.

Six returned banished were charged before the Full Bench (Mr. Justice Wood) when the November Criminal Sessions opened at the Supreme Court this morning. Tsang Fai was sentenced to two years' hard labour; Chuang Tak-fong to two years' hard labour; Wong Hing, to three years; Li Po, who stated that his reason for returning was that he had a blind mother to support, three years; Young Sam, three years; and Cheung Wing, three years.

The current attraction at the King's Theatre is "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm". People who saw it yesterday were unanimous in their verdict that the picture is exceptionally good for a story which is familiar but which has lost nothing from original treatment, judicious cutting and splendid acting. Mary Nixon, in the title role, has established a strong local following for her charming portrayal in this production, and Louise Clouser Hale, in the role of one of the spinster aunts, leaves us on tip-toes waiting for her next picture. Decidedly good, and should be seen by all. Accompanying the feature film is a 10-minute reel showing the 1932 Olympic Games at the Los Angeles Stadium.

The Hon. Treasurer of the St. John Ambulance Brigade begs to acknowledge with grateful thanks the sum of $300 subscribed by the Kai Fong Benevolent Boat Guild, Cheung Chau, towards the work done by the Brigade on the island.

SIGNIFICANT!

IN his opening lecture to students
of the class in advertising at Hurler-Wait College, Mr. H. McKean, referred to a famous merchant who had realized
that the number of buyers he could reach by the personal endorsement of his staff was strictly limited. Trying to get a large number of new customers by means of the Post was too costly,
so he was coming back to Press
Advertising, especially for new customers, as he found that after all, Press
Advertising was the quickest and cheapest way to secure a great many
new customers.

There are dozens of advertising
schemes, but only Press Advertising
takes the message into the home every day!

AND it is well to remember that Press
Advertising does assist the customer
— the newspaper is a business directory read every day — because it changes
every day!

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

SNAPSHOTS.

From a Dress Show.

A wide band of ribbed woollen knitting, like a stocking top—the newest idea for sports caps in Paris. The band is so wide that the top has a decidedly jaunty tilt. There is no crown, the head being open to the air. The new cap is worn slightly on one side.

A more formal variation has the top filled in with a circle of fur, which, being heavier than the wool, makes the top fall over a little.

Fine Shetland wool used for some of the newest sports blouses which are tucked inside the skirt. The blouse itself is perfectly plain, but the design follows the style of some of the old Shetland shawls.

A new "neckwear" idea introduced by a young London designer—a miniature Shetland wool shawl, half in black and half in white, worn as a scarf on the square décolleté in front.

A black crepe apron worn over a black lace evening dress and lying in a large bow at the back of the skirt.

Little round black astrakhan caps with a bouquet of flowers placed in front and small round astrakhan capes to match.

Hip capes trimmed with several bands of magnificent fox fur placed so closely together that the material is hardly visible between them.

Evening dresses of satin and silk with a peculiar dull brilliance which gives the mannequin the effect of having been out in a shower of rain.

Russian embroidery on morning frocks, done in tiny red beads instead of silk.

Curious fastenings on coats and jackets composed of large round

"buttons" with hollow centres sewn over a corresponding hole in the material. "Boothco" cords with long metal tags are pulled through these from the opposing side, and tied.

New type of trimming made of thick curls of flax silk used on evening jackets, gauntlet gloves, and outlining the décolleté of evening dresses.

Three fox scarves joined together by large metal rings.

A very abbreviated evening jacket, which is really only a band of material with full puff elbow sleeves. When this is slipped on it looks part of the frock.

Knitted roll collars in two or three different colours on morning frocks, with belts to match.

"MAKE YOUR HAIR BEAUTIFUL!"

(By a Beauty Expert)

The hair changes with the seasons. It is therefore, not surprising to learn that the hairdressing saloons are now full of women who are anxious to retrieve the hair's lost attractiveness.

The connexion between health and appearance cannot be over-emphasized, particularly in relation to the hair. Brittle, lifeless, and colourless hair is frequently caused by anaemia and nerves, so there is often need for blood-forming foods and tonics in addition to the external treatment. Diet is a big factor.

Under-nourished nerves, for example, will readily cause premature greyness and brittle, lustreless hair while excessively greasy hair generally points to over-acidity. Thus, to correct the former a nourishing diet should be taken. Plenty of sleep, rest, and fresh air is also required to feed and soothe the over-strained nerves. On the other hand, acidity of the system can only be overcome by a corrective medicine and careful dietary.

Scalp Treatment

Now for the scalp treatment. The finest treatment for the hair is plenty of brushwork—regular daily brushing. Unfortunately, few heads get enough. These are the days of curls and waves, and they seem to have ousted the hair brush, many women fearing to brush the hair very thoroughly because of scaring the waves away. As a matter of fact, well brushed healthy hair holds a certain amount of electricity, and this is easier to wave.

So go ahead with your brushing. Brush thoroughly, then spray a little setting lotion over, and finally fix the curls or waves in the desired position. The result will convince you that brushing attracts the waves rather than otherwise.

If the hair is of dry texture rub in a tablespoonful of warm olive oil before the fortnightly shampoo, and use a little brilliantine after dressing the hair. For preference, use the "egg and olive oil" shampoo—a mixture both nutritious and cleansing.

Massage is splendid for the hair, for it stimulates the glands under the scalp, and so feeds the hair. Five minutes of these movements, night and morning, is the finest tonic imaginable to tired, faded hair.

Speaking of tonics, some of the simplest mixtures are the most effective. The following is good for dry hair:—Half an ounce of liquid paraffin (the medicinal variety) and four ounces of cheap eau-de-Cologne. For greasy hair, an astringent mixture is required. A mixture of bay rum, cantharides, and rosemary is as good as anything, and can be inexpensively mixed up at any chemist's.

PARISIAN NOTES.

The New Green.

A word about colours. As everyone knows, Paris invents a new colour each season; that is to say for spring summer, autumn and winter.

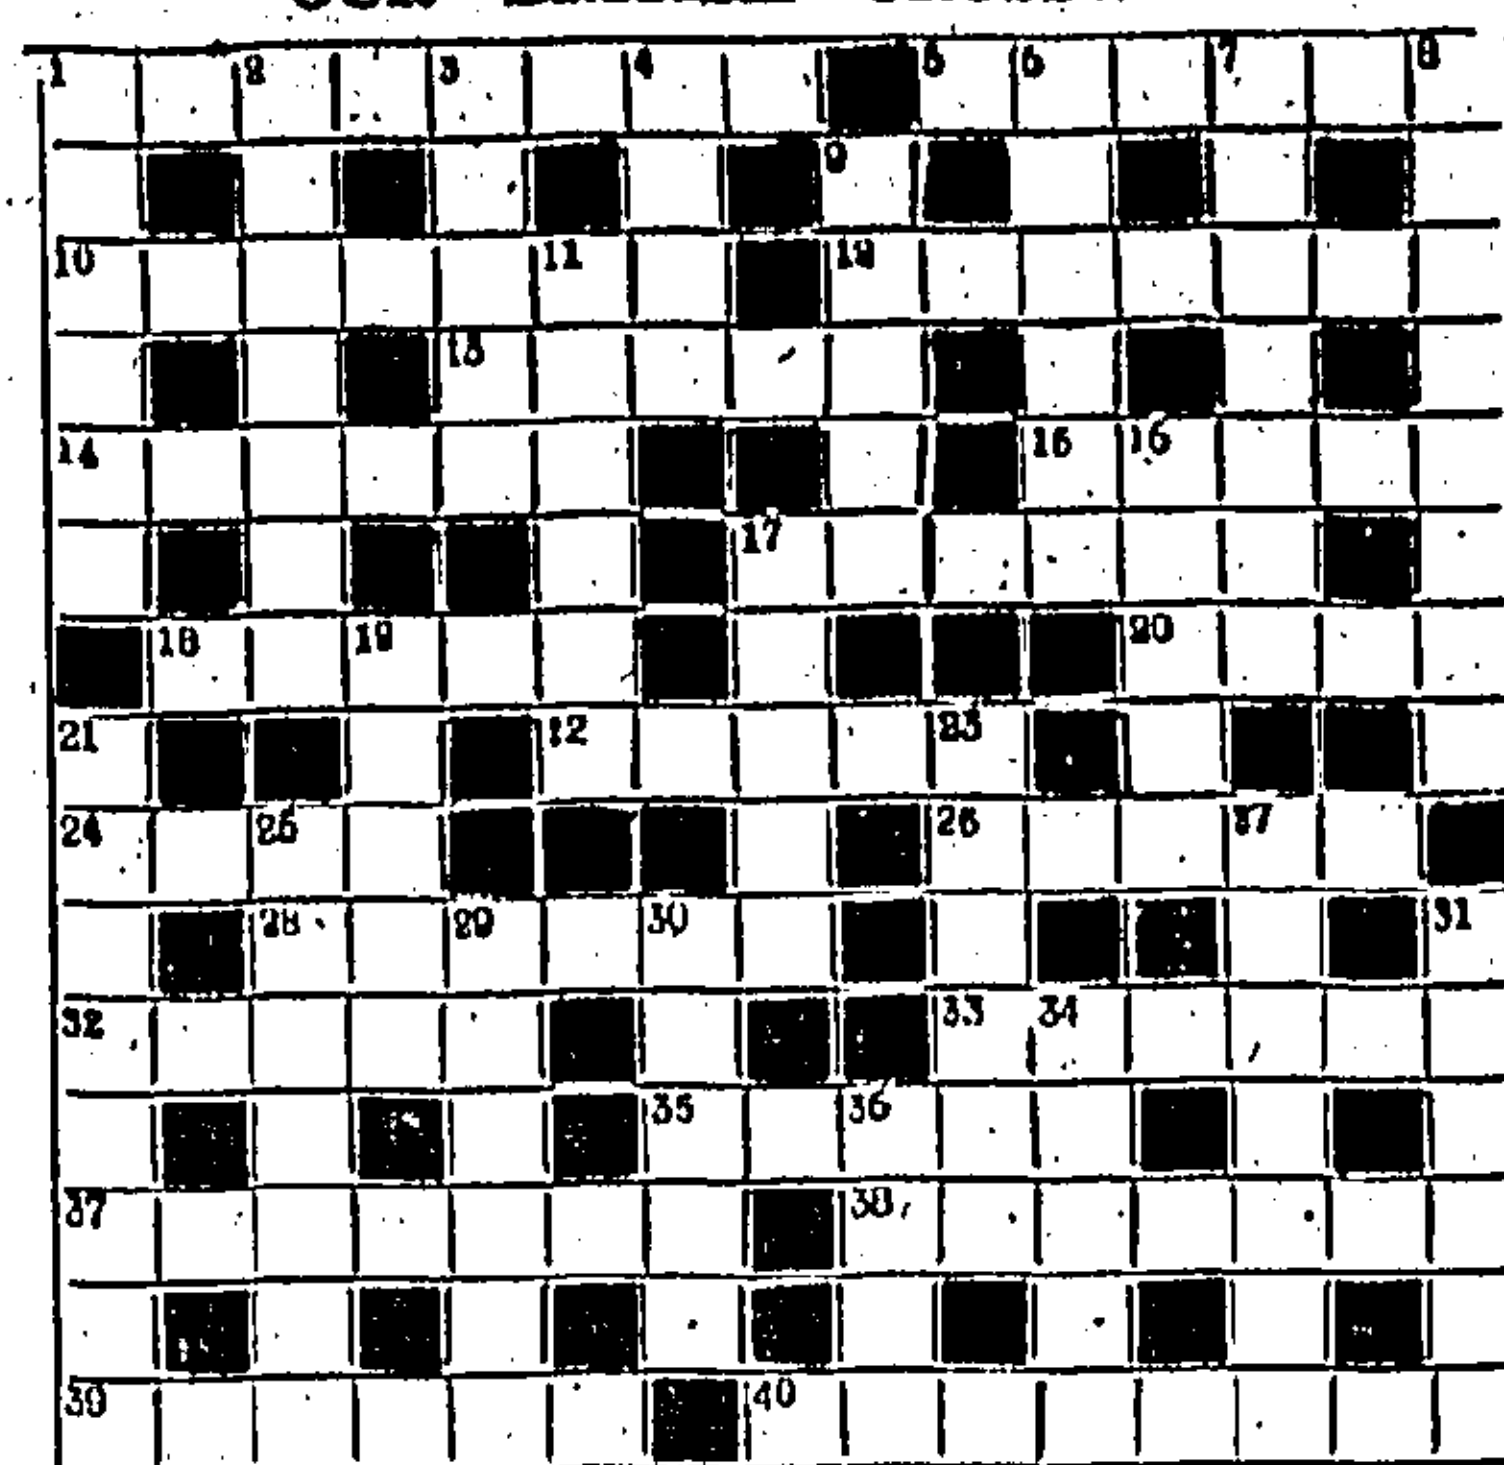

For the autumn of 1932 Paris presents us with a deep and lovely green with a good deal of yellow in it. And for fear of lingering superstition prejudicing women against it, Paris has taken counsel of the most authoritative chiro-mancienne, and has learned that this new green—because it is a yellow green—has protective astral influences, so that the wearer of it may be assured of happiness and good luck! In any case it is a superb shade, and becoming alike to fair and dark women, and particularly to the red-haired.

Some red-haired women looked quite lovely at the Casino at Deauville, in frocks and ensembles of this new green which set off their beauty to perfection. For the rest, marine-blue is an important colour, together with coral, geranium, white, and a striking "astrakhan" beige.

For yachting and for jaunts in speed boats, there are trousers of white cloth worn with a tuck-in shirt of heavy silk and a mannish tailored jacket of dark blue or dark red cloth.

Some of these suits are consciously amusing as, for instance a white suit cut like a mechanic's overall, or a Mexican suit with flared trousers. The majority, however, are plain and practical, serving their purpose admirably.

HOUSE OF LORDS REFORM

Although not a burning question at the moment, House of Lords reform is destined to receive considerable attention in the relatively near future. Although figuring in party programmes for some years past, the issue has remained largely dormant, due in great measure to matters of greater urgency and moment demanding consideration. In any event, the problem has not dominated politics since the powers of the Upper Chamber were considerably restricted and modified by the Parliament Act of 1911 to anything like the extent that it did before the passing of that enactment. Even so, it has long been felt that the Parliament Act by no means represented the full extent to which reform was called for, and the position has thus been left in a rather unsatisfactory state. Not only have Liberals and Labourites kept in mind the need of further overhaul, but the Conservatives also have realised that the time must come when further changes will have to be made. Hence the recent recommendations by a body of Conservative Peers and Commoners which aim at a cutting down of the numerical strength of the Second Chamber, a recognition of the elective principle, and the possible admission of lady members.

It is interesting now to recall some ideas which were advanced several years ago by Professor L. T. Hobhouse, in his work on "Liberalism," as to the wisest lines on which to proceed with reform of the House of Lords. These envisaged as a real need an impartial Second Chamber distinctly subordinate to the House of Commons, incapable of touching finance and therefore of overthrowing a Ministry, but able to secure the submission of a man-sure either to the direct vote of the people or to the verdict of a second election—the Government of the day having the choice between the alternatives. Such a Chamber might be instituted by direct popular election, although the multiplicity of elections might not be good for democracy, and it would be difficult to reconcile a directly-elected House to a subordinate position. Thus the idea was advanced by Professor Hobhouse that, as an alternative, the Chamber might be elected on a proportional system by the House of Commons itself, its members retaining their seats for two Parliaments. To bridge over the change, half of the Chamber for the existing Parliament might, it was suggested, be elected by the existing House of Lords, and their representatives retiring at the end of Parliament would leave the next House of Commons, and every future House, with one-half of the Chamber to elect. The merit of this scheme was that the Second Chamber would then reflect in equal proportions the existing and the last House of Commons, and the balance between parties should therefore be fairly held. Such an Upper House would have ample power of securing reasonable amendments to measures which came before it, and would most likely be careful to exercise moderation in pressing its views.

When we come down to bed-rock, however, these matters of form are of secondary importance. As Professor Hobson himself has expressed it, we need in these matters less of the fanatics of sectarianism and more of the unifying mind. Our reformers must learn to rely less on the advertising value of immediate success, and more on the deeper but less striking changes of practice or of feeling, to think less of catching votes and more of convincing opinion. We need a fuller co-operation among those of genuine democratic feeling, by whatever name they are labelled, and more agreement as to the order of reform. Given this, there is every reason to hope and believe that English constitutional changes can be devised along lines adapted to the real needs of the times, whatever they may be.

A Man Without a Country.

The march of the years and the growth of the Bolshevik movement from a radical theory to a recognisable form of government, have not lessened foreign fears of the once-dynamic man who, with Lenin, ruled Russia after the Revolution. The recent action of Czechoslovakia in refusing admittance to Trotsky added yet another to the list of countries that have barred him and made him famous as the modern counterpart of "The Man Without a Country." Since Stalin made himself the uncontested master of Russia, Trotsky has been living in exile in the dull Prinkipo Islands near Istanbul. Stalin's agents, after having taken Trotsky into exile in a remote village in Turkestan, still considered him dangerous so they gave him further marching orders in 1929 and Mustapha Kemal allowed him to live in Prinkipo. He at once set about trying to get permission to live elsewhere. First he applied to Germany. The once-arrogant head of the Red Army applied in most humble terms. He guaranteed he would live in complete isolation outside of Berlin, would in no case present himself at public meetings, and in his writings would conform strictly to the regulations of German laws on the subject. The governmental officials said they did not think Trotsky was so sick that he needed German doctors and German waters. Trotsky then applied to Norway. There was a big debate in the Diet. The head of the police expressed grave fears that Trotsky might be assassinated. Norway rejected him. He turned to France. The French government said the expulsion order, whereby he had been sent out of France, was still on the books.

After a full discussion at the last meeting it was decided by majority vote to hold future meetings in Gloucester Building, beginning with Tuesday, November 22. A motion was carried by acclamation that a letter be addressed to Messrs. Lane, Crawford Ltd., thanking them for the excellent service they had rendered to the Club since its formation.

The health bulletin for Eastern ports for the week ended November 12, shows the following cases of infectious diseases and deaths therefrom.—Plague, Beirut 2 cases, Rangoon one case, Colombo 2 cases one death, Calcutta 28 cases 3 deaths, Small-pox, Alexandria, 6 cases 3 deaths, Baghdad 3 cases, Basrah 23 cases 13 deaths, Bombay 12 cases 3 deaths, Calcutta 10 cases 5 deaths, Madras 38 cases 13 deaths, Nagapatnam one death, Rangoon one case, Tulucoorin 3 cases one death, Saigon one case one death, and Canton 13 cases.

Then he turned to England, famous as a country which has given asylum to political exiles. The Labour government was in power. But Mr. Clynes, refused to let Trotsky go to England. Recently his health became so bad that in desperation he applied to the government of Czechoslovakia for permission to take the waters at Pstyan Spa in Slovakia. The Czech cabinet finally refused and when Trotsky had almost given up in despair, he suddenly found that Denmark was prepared to have him as a temporary guest and he sailed last week for Marseilles. There must be a moral in his story somewhere.

ARE WE LOSING OUR LAUGHTER?

By "SENTINEL"

A PHILOSOPHIC STUDENT of human nature assured me the other day that Englishmen are losing the faculty of humour. We no longer produce original jests or appreciate them, he insisted, and what Hobbes called the "sudden glory" of laughter is far less frequent than it was twenty or even ten years ago. With the exception of Mr. Wodehouse, who is merely the literary equivalent of a knock-about low comedian with some knowledge of English and American slang (his criticism, not mine) we have not given the English-speaking world a master of merriment for a whole generation. There have been no successors to Edward Lear and Lewis Carroll and W. S. Gilbert, who were the descendants of Mother Goose, and like her, could create elemental nonsense—the real nonsense which resembles music in that it has no meaning outside itself.

It is true that little volumes of humorous verse often appear as Christmas approaches. The versifiers of Mr. Punch's School, who may perhaps be described as Sir Owen Seaman's pupils, are always virtuous in their way. But, even with the help of clever illustrators, do they elicit those loud gusts of laughter which purge the mind of melancholy? As for the comic rhymes for children, which are prepared for the Christmas trade in gift-books, they never seem to catch on in the nursery—except as materials for building palaces or prisons for the family cat.

They never attain the popularity of Mother Goose's "Barber, barber, shave a pig," or her lamentable legend of Dr. Foster's journey. And for children of all ages, from eight to eighty, the cunningly wrought light verse of to-day is never as mirth-provoking as Lear's Old Man of Thermopylae who never did anything properly, or the proposal of Gilbert's Captain Reece to the little old mother of his Bosun:

And does it want a wedding ring?
It was a tempting jingle sing.
(I never look at the accompanying picture without emitting a sudden hoot of laughter) or any of Lewis Carroll's essays in word-creation, which is the very essence of nonsense verse.

The greatest of these three good-humourists was Edward Lear, and I was surprised to find him left out of "Great Victorians," though well aware that the modern steeplebrow as well as the no-brows do not care for his stuff. Though he did not hit upon the portmanteau idea (that was Lewis Carroll's discovery) he is unrivalled as a word-juggler. He was the equal of Byron and Browning in the making of triple rhymes, as in the following example:

There was an old Lady of Winchester,
Who said, If you needle or pin shall see,
His trick of coupling a serious word with an absurd invention, as in "quite galoobious and genteel," affects me as would the sight of an Archbishop entering the House of Lords with a green toy-balloon on a string. And who but he would ever have thought of ending a complimentary letter with the "ombliferous" phrases: "Yours absquiously and full of blomphous and umphsious congratulation?"

"It has come to this," complained the philosopher I have been quoting, "that we must now depend on America for a supply of original humour." Certainly the American humorist has added to the gaiety of this nation in the further and nearer past. Mark Twain, for example, belongs as much to us as to his compatriots. The only time I ever met him, on one of his infrequent visits to this country, he confessed to feeling a little depressed, owing to "seeing too much damp scenery." But he became livelier in the course of conversation, and quoted an amusing remark by his wife (which I have clean forgotten) adding: "And I don't suppose she has made half-a-dozen jokes in her whole life." Being married to a world's jester must make for seriousness.

C. G. Leland, the inventor of Hans Breitmann and his immortal "Barty" where:

De gompany fighted mit dable-

loggs
Till de constable made 'em stop was another benefactor to all those for whom, to adapt Blake's famous line, a laugh is an intellectual thing. I would not advocate a Tariff on foreign-made humour which would exclude the joyous jestings of such American exports, even though it might improve the financial status of Stephen Leacock, manifestly Mark Twain's successor, and other Canadian humorists.

Besides, Canada has held her own as a purveyor of original humour ever since Judge Halliburton created "Sam Slick" with his wooden nutmegs, now universally accepted as the typical Yankee inventor of "notions" made to sell. And in the late W. H. Drummond, who caused the French habitant to tell us all about himself in his own quaint broken English, she has given us something more than an "opposite number" to Leland—one of those rare humorists, in truth, who seem to have grown up naturally out of the kindly soil, like a tree blossoming to fruition. There is a line in his description of the sudden arrival of spring in the Laurentian land:

And every'ing crazy all over de place, which is always running in my mind, when the dark dank days of winter are about to depart.

Nor would I exclude by means of ad valorem import duties (our fiscal Cerebus would find them difficult indeed to compute) such recently-published provocations to laughter from the United States as "The Specialist" and "Hard Lines." Ogden Nash, the author of the last-named book, is one of the few versifiers with the uncommon sense required for writing real nonsense. I find his deliberately false rhymes as amusing at times as Lear's. Thus in his "Hymn to the Sun and Myself," the young man who is celebrating his arrival at the age of 27½ and congratulating himself on being privileged to be alive and do some of the work of the world from nine to five, is glad to think he has been "naturalier and naturalier" with his girl and so has succeeded in remaining a "careless naturalier." It recalls the pleasing popular song, in which they all cried "Warrior" and "Freda," and is perhaps a subtle skit on our slovenly habits of slurred speech.

He sometimes produces spoof aphorisms such as:

A good way to forget to-day's sorrows
Is by thinking hard about to-morrow's and:
A girl whose lips are covered with paint
Has an advantage with me over one whose ain't
(which is true, unfortunately) and:

Among the anthropophagi
People's friends are people's sarcophagi.

It is all nonsense, with at times a little flavouring of common-sense, and if you do not love the nonsensical, you will not even smile at it.

It may be true, however, that we are not losing our faculty of humour but developing a more subtle sense of what is worth laughing at. Such is the contention of some celebrated authorities on the theatre and the cinema whom I have been consulting over the telephone. They are all convinced that the British public is too fastidious nowadays to be amused at the "crude comedy" of Marie Lloyd, or even of that much more amiable personality, Bessie Bellwood, who could hold the biggest audience in the hallow of her hand. The "Lion Comique" of the old days, I am also assured, would be far too leonine for the varieties of to-day. I used to say the same sort of thing thirty years ago to

WALLER BRIBE CASE

MR. FRASER OUTLINES BASIS OF CHARGE

TAIPO INCIDENT

On a charge of obtaining $50 as a bribe while a public servant from Mr. Ho Hong Sang, at Taiipo Market on October 2, with a view to obtaining a prosecution for an offence under the Opium Ordinance, Acting Sub. Inspector H. H. Waller, appeared before the Chief Justice (Sir Joseph Kemp) at the Criminal Sessions this morning.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, assistant Attorney General, prosecuted on behalf of the Crown, and Mr. Duncan McNeill, instructed by Mr. G. K. Hall Brutton, appeared for the accused who pleaded not guilty.

The jury comprised Messrs. A. H. Carroll (foreman), Wong Katt Chiu, Sham Au-ping, Thomas B. Wilson, P. S. Carnac, W. S. V. Curtis and F. F. Wuthrich.

CROWN CASE.

Mr. Fraser said: "Defendant in this case is an acting-sub-inspector of the Police Force of Hongkong, and the charge against him is of obtaining a bribe of $50 from a man named Ho Hong Sang, with a view to obtaining a prosecution. The reason for this was that the man was in possession of a certain amount of opium."

"The facts briefly are these. On October 2nd, at about mid-day, accused, together with another police officer, a Chinese detective, was engaged in street cleansing in Taiipo Market, a small village a short way from Taiipo Police Station. The houses in this village are mainly shops and you can go through one shop into another. The officer walked through one shop, called Mo Wah Tong, and came face to face with the rear of a small cubicle and in that cubicle he saw a man handling a packet of opium. He entered the cubicle followed by the detective."

MONEY HANDED OVER.

"There he took the opium and handed it to the detective. He conversed with the detective and as a result of that conversation, the detective later obtained $50 from the man and took the man to the accused, who was in another shop, and the money was there handed over."

"The evidence which will be produced will be that of the man who offered the bribe and from whom it was obtained. He would say he was handing the opium when accused came in and took the opium from him, laid it on the table and left the cubicle. After a conversation with the detective, he obtained $50 from his master, and the detective took him to the other shop where he handed the money over. That was the evidence of the man who was liable to be accused of a serious crime."

OTHER EVIDENCE.

"The next witness will be the man who was in the cubicle at the time and he will say he saw the accused receive the bribe. At the time he did not know there was opium in the packet. He saw the accused come in, take the packet and say 'This is opium.' The next important witness is an old man who is unable to attend this morning on account of illness and his evidence will be given from the depositions. He will corroborate the previous witness."

"The next witness which the prosecution calls is the Chinese detective who was with accused at the time. He was asked about the offence some time afterwards and denied all knowledge of the affair. He himself was a party in taking this money. This is a rather serious offence for a man of the rank of detective to deny all knowledge of it. He was asked some time later and again denied knowledge."

DETECTIVE'S ADMISSION.

"At a still later date, he admitted the offence. He would say he went into the cubicle with accused. Accused called him to the door and said certain words to him. Those words were 'I arrested the opium. The fine will be $200. You talk to him $100. If no money $50.' The man's master will also give evidence of obtaining the money and handing it over. 'Accused went into hospital after the events alleged to have taken place and when he came out on October 17th was arrested and charged in the usual way and his statement was simply 'I deny the charge.'"

Charles Arthur Grimes, chief draftsman, P.W.D., gave evidence relating to plans made by him of buildings at Taiipo, and Dr. A. R. Wong, assistant Medical Officer in the New Territories, said he had examined Wong Fat, one of the witnesses in the case, adding that and his use of governmental funds amounting to $100,000 to organise the recent Shanghai Chinese postal workers' strike, are contained in a lengthy telegram dispatched to Nanking by Mr. Chen Fu-mu, former Vice-Minister of Communications and assistant of General Chan Ming-shu, whose previous association with the China Merchants S. N. Company as its General Director has made him one of the central figures in the Shanghai loan sensation.

MARQUIS LI VERY ILL

This telegram is an answer to Mr. Chu Chia-hua's suggestion that Mr. Chen Fu-mu must be held responsible for the loan negotiations with the China Realty Co. and must be punished by the Kuomintang at the coming Third Plenary Session in December.

"BEAR" MOVEMENT.

In his telegram Mr. Chen Fu-mu, who is believed to be still in Hongkong, states that after his assumption of the post of General Director of the C.M.S.N. Co. he was informed of a deliberate attempt by a certain Government official to depress the market value of the Company's shares, and to purchase the entire C.M.S.N. Co. property for a mere $2,000,000 or $3,000,000, when the shares were depressed to their lowest point. The assets of the C.M.S.N. Co., it is stated, are actually worth about $50,000,000.

Answering the Nanking charge against Marquis Li Kuo-chieh and himself that the loan with the China Realty Company was floated on a 85 per cent. basis, Mr. Chen Fu-mu cites the recent case of the Shanghai Chinese Municipal Government which secured foreign loans on a 85 per cent. basis in connexion with the rehabilitation of the war devastated areas in Shanghai.

OPIUM TRANSPORT.

Mr. Chen further alleges that he was informed when in Shanghai that a strong financial syndicate was taking advantage of the seizure of the C.M.S.N. Co. from its former management because this syndicate desired to make use of the company's steamers for the transportation of opium in connexion with the suggested farming out by the Government of opium sales in Shanghai and other cities.

The telegram concludes with the statement that the arrest of Marquis Li is illegal and the seizure of the C.M.S.N. Co. properties would benefit only a few, who were endeavouring to negotiate the sale of the Company's shares to foreign interests in Shanghai at a price of from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000.

DOCUMENTS PRESERVED.

Mr. Chen also says that he foresaw Nanking's intervention in the loan question and consequently when the management obtained an initial payment of $700,000 from the China Realty Co. he instructed Marquis Li to have the money safely deposited and all documents pertaining to the mortgage with the China Realty Co. were preserved for any subsequent enquiry into the negotiation of this loan.

DUMPED CHILD'S BODY

TAIKOO WORKER FINED

For dumping the body of a 2-year-old child without a permit at Shauiwan, a Tarkoo dock hand, Cheung Ah-hing, was fined $25 by Mr. Schofield to-day, with the alternative of a month's hard labour.

The corpse was dumped at the rear of the Public Dispensary, which conformed to the prescribed practice there, but the offence lay in the man, who claimed that he first found it dumped at his threshold, not having reported the matter to the authorities.

Inspector Stimson, in charge of the case, said there were no suspicious circumstances.

Through being accidentally knocked down by an Aberdeen motor bus on the Pokfulam Road, near High Street yesterday, an unknown Chinese woman, aged about 50 years, was instantly killed. Her body was later removed to the Public Mortuary.

FOKI'S STORY.

Ho Hong Sang, foki of the Mo Wa Tong medicine shop, said that on October 1, a friend of his brought some opium to him to keep in safe custody. The opium was raw and was wrapped up in a Chinese newspaper. He was examining the opium in the cubicle when accused came in, took the opium and asked if he had any more. He said he had no more and accused then demanded $100, saying that if he had not $100 he was to pay $50. He demanded it through the detective. Witness obtained the money from his master and it was handed to the accused. The case is proceeding.

ECONOMY DRIVE IN CANTON

Regulations for Officials

PRIVATE LIFE NOT IMMUNE

For the purpose of encouraging thrift, the South-west Committee of the Kuomintang has issued a circular order requiring all government servants to limit their expenses for entertainment and in ceremonial affairs.

The circular order which is applicable to all public servants in Canton and Kwangtung province requires that they should use inexpensive native materials for their dress.

If a dinner is given in the city, it says, the cost shall not exceed $20; and dinners held in rural districts shall not entail a cost of more than $10.

Other provisions are as follows: Expenses for marriage ceremonies should be curtailed as much as possible. While a band may accompany the wedding procession, ceremonial paraphernalia (Yi Chang) is not allowed to be carried along the streets. To welcome guests to a wedding, only tea is necessary, that is to say expensive banquets are to be dispensed with.

FUNERAL RITES.

Funeral rites should be made as simple as possible, and all spectacular displays are to be avoided, such as the burning of paper houses, furniture, joss papers dedicated to the dead, etc. Prayers offered to the departed spirit are to be given only in a monastery. All memorial scrolls should be made of native cloth.

In birthday parties, guests should be served only with noodles or spaghetti (which indicate long life), and no other edibles are necessary. There should be no entertaining on occasions such as house-warming, the first month after the birth of children or their following birthdays.

Gifts to friends and relatives on happy events should not cost more than $2, but contributions to a bereaved family are not restricted to any definite sum.—Central Press.

LILIUS TRIAL BEGINS

PROSECUTION GIVES EVIDENCE

Manila, Nov. 19. The trial of Alejo E. Lilius, correspondent of various magazines, for alleged swindling against R. L. Hobbs, of the Luneta Hotel, began yesterday in the court of Judge Pedro Concepcion. Lilius is charged with having allegedly passed bad cheques to Hobbs in payment of obligations.

In the trial yesterday, however, it developed that Lilius had previously made payments on these hotel obligations and that he had made assignments in favour of Hobbs to cover up the amounts of the cheques. Hobbs occupied the witness stand as first witness to the prosecution and remained there all day. The trial is to be continued next Wednesday November 23.

Hobbs testified in direct examination about his receipt of the cheques from Lilius against the Jolo branch of the Philippine National Bank and the return to him of the cheques because Lilius did not have sufficient funds. He brought with him hotel records to aid him in his testimony.

Hobbs admitted that two cheques were given him by Lilius in payment for the three bad cheques previously given him. These cheques, however, he kept in his safe and did not send to the bank because he knew Lilius had no funds in the bank.

On account of the seeming reluctance of Hobbs to reply to cross-examination questions, Mr. Wolfson, attorney for the defence, told him: "You speak the truth or I'll get mad." Hobbs replied: "Go ahead and bust yourself!"

Fuk Ngau, master of a cargo boat, was fined $10 by Comdr. Newell, at the Harbour Office this morning, for having failed to carry a bright light at the fore masthead of his boat whilst underway in the harbour yesterday.

"The Doomed Battalion," now showing at the Central Theatre, is one of the best of the films which Universal have made. It is almost too stark in its realism, it lacks any kind of light relief, but it is definitely one of the big film achievements of the year, an admirable example of the most remarkable newcomers to the English-speaking talkies, and his ease and grace in some of the skilful scenes are something to be remembered. Here is a picture that is definitely worth going to see, and is not patron of the Central Theatre will come away disappointed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

An Island Incident.

[To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.]

Sir,—A message from one of the Chinese press agencies reproduced in your columns, regarding the alleged arrest by the Macao police of a man who was carrying out a survey on an island near Macao, calls for comment.

To understand the question, it must be known that the right of tenure as regards the island referred to, with two others, has never been settled ever since the Sino-Portuguese Treaty of 1887. The inhabitants, moreover, live on the most friendly terms with the Portuguese from whom they have received many favours, arms and ammunition and funds to equip themselves against pirate attacks, and money for the establishment of schools and a leprosy hospital, the latter receiving medical treatment from the Portuguese from time to time.

It happened that a Chinese surveyor went to the island referred to, to carry out surveys, because of a dispute between two Chinese in connexion with some private property (and not for international boundary limits as the message referred to tries to make out) and failed to advise the Portuguese of his visit to the island. The villagers, who look upon all strangers with suspicion, promptly notified the nearest police, who happened to be the Portuguese, and the surveyor was requested to present his credentials to the Macao authorities. This he did and then retired to Shekki. He was never arrested by the Portuguese, and there never was a trial, much less a court martial as the message tries to make out.

Almost immediately afterwards, however, a number of students at Shekki took up the matter and, by distortion of the facts of the case, have been trying to stir up trouble. Mr. Tong Shao-yi was invited by some Chinese (not by the Portuguese) to look into the question, and he is reported to have been busy in Canton examining the files relating to the islands.

No less an authority than Mr. Chiu Siu-tan, Commissioner of Foreign Affairs in Canton, in an interview, which was published in the Wah Taz Yat Po on the 14th inst., declared:—"Macao has lent materials to the inhabitants of those islands to defend themselves against attacks of pirates, and has given money for the establishment of schools, and has helped the inhabitants of that locality in other ways. Because of this there seem to be people who believe that the Portuguese are desirous of taking possession of those islands. The Portuguese, explaining the case to us, declare that they have no intention of taking any of our territory, and I believe their statement."

He concluded by saying, "I look forward to the time when the Nanking Government will nominate a special delegate to establish the limits definitely with a delegate from the Portuguese government, so that the dispute will be settled once and for all." The Chinese people are seeking the friendship and good will of other nations, and irresponsible students should not be permitted to interfere in matters that are beyond their capabilities. It is a poor commentary on the methods of some of the teachers who would be better occupied in preparing their pupils for a useful life instead of stirring up trouble by lying and mischievous propaganda.

It is sincerely to be hoped that those best able to settle international disputes be left to do so and that students be sent back to their books.—Yours, etc., J. A. R.

RECENT MURDERS REWARDS OFFERED BY POLICE

Rewards leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons concerned in two recent murders have been notified by Police Headquarters.

A sum of $500 is offered for information which will result in the arrest and conviction of any person or persons for the murder of a sampan woman who together with her daughter were done to death and their bodies thrown overboard on November 3 last. Two men are known to have hired the woman's boat which was subsequently found abandoned.

For the necessary information concerning the murder of a Chinese on the hillside at Shatin a sum of $250 is being offered. It will be remembered that on September 7 last the body of the deceased man was found in a grave and, on being exhumed, marks of violence were found, suggesting that the man had been murdered.

INTERPORTERS NOW DEPENDING ON FORLORN HOPE

Navy Again Triumph

CLUB BACKS CAUSE OF RUGBY DEFEAT

Opportunities Missed by the Dozens

ROBERTS SHADOWED

(By "Fly Half")

Navy 9 pts.
Club 3 pts.

The Club had out a much stronger side than on the previous Saturday when they beat the Army, and had great hopes of turning the tables on their opponents, who had won the first match. Grieve, the old Interporter, who has been out of the game for a long while, made a welcome re-appearance at full back, and Bradford and Kerr returned to strengthen the pack. Selby, though much better, was still unable to take his place, but the club had the assistance of John Roberts the Welsh international, who turned out at centre three-quarter. The Navy seemed to have put their strongest possible side, with Buckley, the Gloucestershire centre again at full back, and Ryder appearing for the first time after his injury, at centre, Armytage being in Ryder's old place at fly half.

NAVY OPEN SCORING

With conditions perfect, if rather warm, McElroy was the toss and set the Navy to face a strong sun which shone straight down the field. The Navy did the pressing in the early stages and following a rush down the touchline in which several of their forwards took part opened the scoring through Denkin, who picked up a few yards from the line and dived over. Doggett sliced his kick at goal.

After this the Club played up hard, and following a good movement by the backs Ferguson scored a magnificent try, running very powerfully and averting inwards at the exact moment to find the Navy defence on the wrong foot and out of position. McElroy's kick went near the touch judges signalled a goal but the referee disallowed it, correctly I think, as the ball seemed to pass about six inches outside the post.

SET SCUM SUPERIORITY. Both sides pressed in turn, the Navy pack having the advantage in the line-outs and in the loose, but the Club being immensely superior in the set scrums, especially after they reverted to the old formation with Kerr (who was not a success at wing forward) and Bradford back in the second row. The handling of both sides was erratic though Ryder was dangerous as ever when he had half and half time arrived with no further score.

The second half saw the Navy take the lead through a bad error on the part of Grieve, who misjudged a long kick ahead and when hard pressed kicked the ball straight to Doggett who was standing unmarked on the touchline and had nothing to do but run straight to score in the corner. He again sliced his kick at goal. Following this further reverse, the Club played up gallantly, and McElroy pressed home the advantage in the set scrums by taking a scrum instead of a line-out whenever possible.

MAGNIFICENT HOOKING. At this stage, McElroy was hooking magnificently, and the ball came back from the Club side of the scrum with monotonous regularity. Macintosh, though badly harassed by Hub-back, gave Turner a good service, but from that point nothing would go right. The passing was atrocious and the positioning both in attack and defence equally bad, so that in nearly every case the backs lost ground, when, had they been playing normally well, they would have been hammering repeatedly at the Navy line.

The Navy defence was usual, excellent, but nothing could condone the pitifully inept Club attack. It was not surprising to find the Navy scoring again, Armytage breaking through and Rothwell scoring in the corner. Buckley made a good shot at goal but was short.

The Club continued to get the ball but could do nothing right to do but they went very close when McElroy short punted across from a free kick and Ferguson gathered and ran strongly to be brought down just short of the line. McElroy and McElroy were also prominent at this stage when the forwards made strenuous efforts to get through themselves, but without avail. No side came with the Navy still holding their six points lead.

POOR CLUB BACKS. As I left the match, I could not but feel that the Club had every reason to be thoroughly disappointed over the result. In the second half especially, the pack got the ball from nearly every scrum, and the backs had enough chances to have scored half a dozen tries against any defence. Instead of driving home their advantage, however, they completely threw it away and could do nothing right at all. Not once during the game did they move as a line. They time their passes badly and were seldom in position to receive them. They either passed much too soon or tried to cut through a ran right into trouble.

A TYPICAL scrum in the Navy v. Club rugby match on Saturday. The Club, although vastly superior in this department, were defeated, mainly through the weakness of the backs. (Photo: Ming Yuen).

In defence the lack of understanding and positioning was equally evident and if the Navy backs had had the same share of the ball from the scrum I feel sure they would have run up a big score.

I feel sorry for Roberts. He found the Club backs on an off day, and when he was given a good pass he nearly always had a couple of Navy players hanging on to him like leeches. In addition he tore a ligament in his leg, and at the end of what must have been, for him, a disappointing game, he also became infected with the prevailing epidemic of bad passing.

Lammert also had an off day, being too inclined to over-run his passes, though some of the blame must go to Griffiths for not timing them properly.

FERGUSON OUTSTANDING. Apart from some good tackles of Ryder, Griffiths had a most unhappy afternoon. He did not seem nearly fit, and it is hoped that next week he will be his old self again. On the other wing, Ferguson was the best of the line. He scored a great try and was often conspicuous. Grieve made one fatal mistake which led to the second Navy try, but otherwise played quite well. He does at least bring his man down if he can lay a hand on him.

Turner had a poor match, his handling, usually his strong point, was bad, and his kicking, like Griffiths, often failed to find touch, which threw extra work on the pack. The forwards had my sympathy. Though they had to play second fiddle in the line-outs and in the loose, they gave their backs enough of the ball to have won the match twice over.

McElroy again hooked wonderfully well and I shudder to think what the score would have been if he had changed sides. Bradford, as ever, was a great worker and McElroy and Miller were prominent in the loose. Hall Thompson was not as good as usual. I am told he had a strenuous morning in camp, which is not the best training for a hard game, but until he tired he worked really well.

NAVY'S SHINING LIGHTS. On the Navy side, Buckley played a beautiful game at full back. He emphasised the Club weakness in finding touch by returning the kicks with credit; his fielding of the ball was perfect, and he was always coolness personified. On his showing in this match the Navy won't miss Gosling which is the highest praise I can give him.

The three-quarters were all good, with Ryder, who was running as powerfully as ever, and Rothwell, the most elusive man on the field and a beautiful tackler, perhaps the best. At half, Armytage was rather erratic. His handling was uncertain and his kicking not so good as in the previous match, but nevertheless he did many excellent things both in attack and defence. Woods at the base of the scrum shared the honours with Macintosh.

FORWARDS' DEFICIENCY. The Navy forwards as usual played a great game, but they have one pronounced weakness, which was heavily underlined by the presence of McElroy in the opposing side; they do not get the ball in the set scrums. In all other respects they are a first class pack, their line-out play is excellent, and they can give the Club many points in getting the ball back from the loose scrums and in backing up. Linton, Watson and Hubback as always, gave a polished display of winging and were the most prominent. The game was admirably refereed by Major McIntyre, R.A.

MAMAK MATCHES

[By "Bully-Off"]

Only two of the four Mamak tournament matches fixed for the week-end were played, postponements being made in the games between the 1st H.K.S. Battery and H.M.S. Parthian, by reason of the fact that the Parthian was out of port, and between the Radio Sports Club and the 12th Battery as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Mrs. Hanib, wife of H. Hanib, one of the Radio members.

The better of the two games played was undoubtedly that between the Royal Corps of Signals and St. Andrew's which resulted in a draw of one goal each. The match, played on the Marina ground, was fast and evenly contested, both sides having a fair share of the exchange.

The Civilians opened the scoring in the first half and although the Signals tried hard to equalise before the interval they were unable to do so. They attacked strongly in the opening exchanges of the second half, and despite hard work by the Saints defence scored the equaliser. Both sides strove hard to get the League points but the score remained unchanged at the final whistle.

100% MAINTAINED.

The Incognitos were far superior to the Kowloon Indians when the teams played for Mamak points on the Marina ground yesterday and gained a 4-1 victory. The Incognitos forwards combined more effectively and their halves were a constant source of danger both in attack and defence. As usual the Reid brothers were outstanding. W. Reid, in the intermediate line spoiling many movements by the opposing forwards. He also shone in attack and fed his forwards well and with good judgment.

The Indians left much to be desired and played a very disjointed game.

Pinto was responsible for the opening goal in the first half, but shortly afterwards the scores were levelled up by the Indians. R. C. Reid put the Incogs ahead before the interval and on resumption added another. The fourth was scored by Francis.

FRIENDLIES.

St. Andrew's Scouts made their debut in hockey this season on Saturday when they defeated the Y.M.C.A. Ladies to the tune of 5 goals to 1 at King's Park. In their team was included five of the Mamak Tournament players and they did well to win. At the interval they had gained a lead of 3 goals to one, Bord, McIndier and Woolley netting for the Troup and Mrs. Reid for the Ladies. In the second half the Scouts increased their lead with two further goals, scored by Woolley.

The R.A.S.C. defeated St. Andrew's Ladies by the only goal scored at King's Park on Saturday, King netting for the Corps.

A scrappy game between the Y.M.C.A. "A" and H.M.S. Kent at King's Park on Saturday resulted in a win for the sailors by 5 goals to two. At the interval the Kent led by 3-1.

ONLY CHANCE TO WIN IS IF SHANGHAI TEAM IS WEAK

FARCICAL DISPLAY IN FINAL PRACTICE MATCH

OVER-RUN BY CHINESE SIDE

(By "Veritas")

AFTER their debacle against the Combined Chinese eleven at Caroline Hill, when they were trounced by 4 goals to 2, the only consolation left to the Hongkong Interport football team is that Shanghai probably cannot turn out such a formidable side as the local representatives met on Saturday. But this, surely, is a disheartening attitude for one to have to adopt? If only the Interporters had displayed a glimmering of enterprise or the faintest suggestion of confidence! As it was they were not only outclassed and completely defeated, but they played with their tails down the first fifteen minutes—an ominous sign.

Many people have been very wise after the event and since Saturday have stated that they quite expected to see the Interport team submerged by the Chinese; but frankly I was amazed. Although there were obvious weaknesses in the side—weaknesses which have been pointed out in these columns for the past few weeks—I had expected to see the forwards come up to the mark. When they failed it came as a natural order of things that the rest of the team collapsed.

One would like to find a ray of hope in the ability of the selected side, but on Saturday's display, one just can't, unless it be that they were not up to their form.

Just the same I feel that they played as well as the opposition would allow them, which means that the Interport team is decidedly weaker than one would at first imagine.

FORLORN HOPE. It is too late to talk much about improvements. One can merely hope that by the time the team reaches Shanghai they will have remembered something of what they know about football. The whole eleven suffered from loss of memory on Saturday.

Although one is inclined to attach paramount blame to the half backs for the collapse of the team, I think this is, perhaps, hardly fair. The whole side had a bad day, and the cause of the disintegration of the Interporters as a unified team was perhaps more psychological than anything else.

Rodgers, despite the fact that he was beaten four times, was comparatively speaking, blameless, and when he did handle the ball it was with his customary skill and confidence.

Lau Man, however, who took Strange's place at left back was a big disappointment. His tackling was half hearted, his anticipations unintelligent, and his covering of Mullane elementary.

Mullane must be given credit for keeping cool under the most severe pressure, and although given double work through the inability of Bliss effectively to mark Shuk Yan with stood the test as well as could be expected.

HALF BACK WEAKNESS AGAIN.

There was a general weakness about half back line, illuminated by reason the reason of the extraordinary cleverness of the opposing forwards. Pardee hopelessly outplayed, never looked good enough to hold Tam Kong-pak, and the constructive side of his play suffered in due proportion.

Bliss gave one his most uninspiring displays to date this season, and appeared to give up as unequal and hopeless, his contest with the Ip Pak-wa—Shuk Yan wing. Andy Duncan was the most demonstrative of the Interport halves, but was scarcely more effective than his colleagues, being well beaten for speed by Tang Kwong-sun, who winged his way along the touchline as though he of course this collapse on the part of the defence had its reactions upon the forwards, but even so one expected a somewhat braver showing. When, however, the two men most likely to bring about a resuscitation—Suen and Wong—themselves broke down before the determined challenge of the Chinese rearguard, there could be only one result—defeat.

HOWE'S LEADERSHIP.

Howe's leadership was no better and no worse than it has been throughout the trials, and he can put in the "extenuating circumstance" plea that he was inadequately served by his colleagues. His chief error no Saturday was one of tactics; he would persist in trying to make individual bursts—through a cast-iron defence when a judicious pass to the waiting Wong Kam-shun might have had better results.

Neither of the inside forwards touched anything like their normal form. They were, of course, closely guarded, and the persistent "policing" of Leung In-chun, Ho Cho-yin and Wong Sui-wa appeared to rattle them into making as many false moves possible. In consequence both Baldry and Cheng Shu-gong on the wings suffered, either from a surfeit of badly directed passes, or complete starvation.

Baldry never got across a dangerous centre, but Cheng willingly accepted the challenge of Tong Kwan, and not always came out second best. He was by far the most thrifful of the Interport forwards, but was given too few opportunities.

One of the most significant features of the Interporters' defeat was that it was sustained at the hands of a team which was composed of two Second Division players, Tang Kwong-sun at outside right and Shuk Yan at outside left, Wong Sin-wah at centre-half who has not played for two years, and two backs, Leung In-chun and Ho Cho-yin, who both normally play back. In addition the Combined Chinese were robbed of the services of Leung Chui-wing at right half.

TRUE TO THEIR NAME.

There is very little to be said about the combined Chinese, and it is adequately summed up in their title. They combined in such a remarkable manner that they literally made rings round the opposition.

Tan Kwong-pak was undoubtedly the outstanding player on the field. He led his forwards brilliantly and registered three magnificent goals, all the result of splendid opportunism. Others who took the eye were Leung and Ho at back, Lai Kwok-chu at

Mrs. Lochner put in some splendid work, but found her partner rather erratic.

Mrs. W. T. Southorn presented the prizes, both for the Tennis League, in which the C.R.C. won all three shields, and the Club's own tournaments.

LESSON SERMON.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST-HONGKONG

"Soul and body" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist yesterday.

The Golden Text was "I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope." (Ps. 130:5.)

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind. Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God." (Rom. 12:1, 2, 3, 4.)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Let us feel the divine energy of Spirit, bringing us into newness of life and recognising no mortal nor material power as able to destroy. Let us rejoice that we are subject to the divine powers that be." Such is the true Science of being." (P. 249: 6-10).

CHINA REALTY CO.

The following extracts are taken from the Chairman's statement at the last annual Shareholders' Meeting, February 29th, 1932.

"We feel that the Debenture holder from an investment standpoint, is just as much an interested partner of the Company as the Common Shareholder and is entitled to his just return on his investment, and by the figures given on the two years' working, I think we have amply proven that we were right that our Debenture holders receive eight per cent. interest instead of six per cent."

"The most successful concerns of the future will be those who recognize this principle—that even banks will allocate to depositors a part of profits earned on their money over and above current rates of interest. As our balance sheets show quite plainly, the proceeds from the sale of our debentures is not used for the purchase of Real Estate, as we are not speculators, but for investment in first class mortgages, amply secured not only by the value of the property pledged as security, but as a further security, the debentures constitute a first claim on the total assets of the Company. An analysis to the figures involved shows that every debenture has behind it assets equal to three times its value."

"If after careful consideration of actual facts and figures you are receiving less than 8 per cent. upon your investment and/or savings, you are not using judgment but following old customs, believing 5 per cent. and 6 per cent. are current rates."

The natural laws of economics require an investor to secure the best return especially upon savings—trust funds—consistent with safety.

COMING CRISIS

MANCHURIA AND DISARMAMENT

London, Nov. 20. "The world on a razor's edge" is the description given by the Sunday Times of the problems with which Geneva and the League of Nations are faced. The Japanese threaten to withdraw from the League if the Lytton report is approved and the future of the Disarmament Conference is still undecided.

Mr. Henry Wickham Stead, former Editor of the Times and of the Review of Reviews, and an authority on the Near and Far East, dealing with this subject, says that if Japan withdraws from the Council, the Council and the Special Assembly will have to consider whether and to what extent the resolution unanimously approved by the Special Assembly on March 11 should be upheld and implemented by other members of the League, together with the United States, since the resolution invoked the Kellogg Pact.

Japanese rejection of the Lytton Report, with or without Japanese withdrawal from the League, might bring about a most serious situation and the fate of the Disarmament Conference may depend on the firmness of the League in upholding the Lytton Report.—Reuter.

Taking Precautions

Shanghai, Nov. 20. Following the discovery of a Communist plot to stir up disturbances among students and workers during the meetings of the council of the League of Nations, with the alleged object of denouncing the Lytton report, the Chinese authorities are taking steps to check possible disorders. A strict watch is now being kept on the activities of suspected workers and students.—Reuter's Special.

Japan's Policy

Tokyo, Nov. 20. Evidence that Japan's attitude regarding Manchuria is unchanged has been provided with the publication of the Japanese observations on the Lytton Report, on which the Foreign Minister, Count Uchida has issued a statement.

"We have not sent delegates to Geneva to argue but to lead the League to a true understanding of the complications of the situation in the Far East," he says. "The War Minister, Gen. Araki has made an informal statement. 'The observations are not intended to refute the report, but to supplement the deficiencies and remove the misunderstandings of the League Commission,' he declares.

He added that the Manchurian problem was now settled as far as Japan and Manchukuo were concerned, and Japan was determined to pursue its settled policy whatever happened.—Reuter.

UNFAIR BARRIERS.

FRENCH CABINET PLANS TRADE PROTECTION

London, Nov. 20. The French Cabinet has decided to bring a Bill before Parliament against foreign dumping as well as against measures considered to be "unfair barriers" to French commerce.

It will introduce also a Bill authorising the coining of five franc pieces in silver to take the place of the five franc paper money now in circulation.—Our Own Correspondent.

CONGRATULATIONS FROM KING.

ROYAL PRAISE FOR AMY JOHNSON'S FLIGHT

London, Nov. 19. "I congratulate you on your splendid achievement and trust you are not too exhausted." Such was the message from His Majesty the King received by Miss Amy Johnson at Cape Town when she awakened from a fifteen hour sleep after her record breaking flight.

Miss Amy Johnson, in a broadcast which was relayed from London, stated that she had chosen the Cape route because, among other things, she was anxious to test her capacity for endurance as she had never before gone sleepless a day and a night. She was not sure whether she could do it but now felt quite fresh and almost ready for a flight back to England.

Her husband, Mr. Mollison, after a telephone talk with his wife to-day, said that there was a possibility she might attempt to break the flight record from Cape Town to England, but he did not think it was likely.

over the world have reached Miss Amy Johnson in Cape Town. Among them were messages from the Secretary for Air, Lord Londonderry, and the Royal Aeronautical Society. Several world flyers including Miss Amelia Earhart, the French Ace, Coues, were among those who expressed their admiration of the really remarkable flight.

Although she had only five hours sleep during the trip, she made up for this last night by sleeping for 17½ hours. Her Do Havilland Puss Moth behaved magnificently throughout the trip and is still in perfect condition.—Reuter and British Wireless.

VITAMIN B

Children—and adults too—require sufficient Vitamin B if they are to enjoy health and vitality. Modern diets are surprisingly low in this important element to strength and vigor.

MIDDAY ROBBERY SEQUEL

WOMAN PLAYS VITAL PART

MAN ARRESTED SIX WEEKS LATER

The story of how a whole family was tied up and robbed in their own sitting-room at mid-day on August 13th, was told at the Criminal Sessions this morning when Sin Kau-Chauk, was charged, with three persons unknown, with robbery.

Mr. T. S. Whyte-Smith, prosecuting, and defendant pleaded not guilty.

The jury comprised Messrs. W. Goldenberg (foreman), C. J. Church, Wai Chi-man, G. T. May, K. W. Chan, C. Crofton and C. E. White.

Mr. Whyte-Smith said the robbery took place at 174, Wanchai Road. The family, named Chan, was in the sitting room and present were Mrs. Chan, her step-son and daughter, and a lady visitor. There was a knock at the door. The son looked through the peep-hole and saw a woman who said "I have a present for Mr. Chan. I want to see him." The son opened the door, the woman put her shoulder against it and four men rushed past her.

Evidence would be called that accused was one of the men and carried a revolver filled with dummy cartridges. The other three men were carrying daggers. The inmates were pushed into the rear cubicle and tied up. The four men then ransacked the house stealing a quantity of money and property.

On September 30th the Police arrested accused at a tea shop. The son and daughter of the house picked him out immediately at the identification parade and the two elder people after a little hesitation. Accused was found guilty and sentenced to three years' hard labour.

Passengers who left by the P. and O. s.s. Corfu on Saturday included Bishop and Mrs. Roberts of Singapore, Dr. and Mrs. Black, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ferguson, Commander E. O. Priestley, Mrs. L. Forster, and Mr. L. H. V. Booth.

The P. and O. s.s. Malwa is due here from Singapore on Thursday at 6 a.m.

CENOTAPH SITTERS

TWO LOITERERS DISCHARGED

LACK OF WARNING NOTICES

Owing to the absence of warning notices, two Chinese who appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Police Court this morning, charged with sitting on the steps of the Cenotaph were acquitted.

The defendants, Wong Kam-cheong, aged 20, described as a merchant, of 98, Bonham Strand, and Wong Pak-fuk, aged 20, a shop fook, of Des Vaux Road, were arrested yesterday by a Chinese constable.

Mr. Wynne-Jones enquired of Inspector Shannon whether any notices were posted at the Cenotaph. Inspector Shannon did not think so. He had not seen any. He agreed the Regulations stated that notices should be posted warning the public.

His Worship:—I do not remember having seen any. The charge must fail.

Inspector Shannon:—I am almost certain there are none. They are certainly not in a conspicuous place, if there are any.

NEW HIGHWAYS IN KIANGSI

FIRST ARMY'S GOOD WORK

Canton, Nov. 19.

Several highways in South Kiangsi have been completed under the auspices of the First Army, which is now in occupation of that area, after subduing or driving away the Reds.

The highway between Nanchang and Cheching in North Kwangtung, is now opened to traffic and will be connected with South Kiangsi. Other highways connecting towns in that province are in process of construction and will be completed in about three months.

Head building in South Kiangsi is one of the rehabilitation schemes to improve the conditions in that territory which was once sorely infested by Communists.—Central Press.

"ROUGH HOUSE" IN WANCHAI

AMERICAN SAILORS INVOLVED

A SHIP'S COOK'S COMPLAINT

An incident at Wanchai on Saturday night was described to Mr. Schofield at the Central Magistracy to-day, when an American sailor, A.A. Gaglan, of the U.S. flagship Houston, was charged with assaulting Lai Wing, a ship's cook. Lai Wing stated that he was walking along Johnston Road with a companion from his ship when he suddenly received a blow in the back. On recovering consciousness, he found himself propped up against a verandah pillar, receiving treatment from a number of compatriots.

Cheung Hing, his companion said the man who struck the blow was an American sailor. He fell on Lai Wing, and was picked up by two other sailors who were with him. He could not identify the assailant.

A Chinese police constable who was attracted to the spot by the sound of whistles, said he saw three American sailors engaging in a fight with a crowd of Chinese, and subsequently, Gaglan, one of the three foreigners, ran into Tai-yuen Street, from which some minutes afterwards, he was brought out by an American naval patrol.

Inspector McLellan, prosecuting, said certain witnesses had gone back on their original stories.

A British petty officer from H.M.S. Devonshire told him that he saw a crowd of Chinese booing the party of American sailors with whom Gaglan was, and that Gaglan was hit in the back of the head with a rice bowl. Gaglan had to be sent to the Hospital for treatment. His Worship discharged the accused.

The lecture which was to have been given on Thursday at the Hongkong Hotel roof-garden by Mr. William Wallace Porter, C.S.B., of New York, on Christian Science, has been postponed until December 21.

A fine of $15 was imposed by Comdr. Newell, at the Harbour Office this morning, on Leung Ying, who was convicted on a charge of having left port without obtaining a clearance yesterday.

The All-American Football Team is seen in action in "Maybe It's Love" now showing at the Queen's Theatre. Joe Bennett is the centre figure around which this comedy drama of sports and college life revolves, and she is irresistible. The picture preserves the theme of buoyant youth and sophisticated modernity, and has several new angles to make it more than ordinarily interesting, having regard to previous productions of the type. Fairly good entertainment.

Mr. F. O. Elliot, credit manager of the Texas Company, arrived here from Manila by the President McKinley, accompanied by his wife.
